SMALL GROUPS OF LILIES SERVES AS GARDEN ACCENT

Though tulips are again be- | * ing imported from Holland, with the exception of a very few from England or Mexico, all lity bulbs offered for planting in this country this fall were grown in America.

For many years before Pearl Harbor, lily bulbs imported from Japan, which was the chief source, had proved unsatisfactory for garden use, and American production had been increasing.

While the supply is nmited, there are enough to provide a few bulbs for everyone, and a few lilies will go a long way in providing garden beauty. Lilies are not effective in mass plantings. They are best used in small groups, or even single plants, as accents at garden focal point.

Hardy lilies are sest planted in the fall. Bulbs are dormant now and must spend the winter either in the ground or in cold storage. They are better off in the ground.

The notion that lilies are hard to grow has small basis in fact. Quite the reverse is true in the case of most varieties.

If your soil is a good sandy loam it should be suitable for most of the hardy lilies. They do best in a light soil perhaps because of its superior drainage. Most of the lilies dislike wet soil and will show immediately the effects of standing in water. A good loam, rich in leaf mold, is fine for them. Do not treat the soil to make it acid, as you would for rhododendrons; and do not lime it. A neutral soil is best. Manure Phone 174 should not be used except as a top dressing and then it must be a year or more old and well rot-

A balanced plant food is fine, and some varieties will need additional spring applications. Use one pint to a bushel of soil. Spade your bed deeply before setting out the bulbs. If you think the ground will be frozen before the bulbs arrive, give the bed mulch of dry leaves or straw to keep it from freezing until you can get the bulbs in. A location where the base of the plant is in light shade is a good one for most lilies. While they dislike standing water, they also dislike drying out, and summer mulch of peat moss or rotted leaves is appreciated. The depth of planting is important Lilium candidum, canadense. martagon and superbum should be planted only 3 to 4 inches
