What of the Coming Year?

THE HAVE BEEN ASKED a good many times VV since the year turned as to what we expect for Prince Rupert in 1947. Quite frankly, we look for no sudden boom in Prince Rupert this year but we do hope for steady progress toward the development and expansion of our great natural resources and the use of our strategically located, amply equipped port and facilities along sound and permanent lines.

In spite of reverses and disappointments which we have suffered since war ended and during the still uncompleted period of transition, we expect, barring some national economic calamity which would carry us all downward, that a year from today Prince Rupert will be enjoying a sounder measure of prosperity than it is today. Meantime, there are none who can say that Prince Rupertwith little if any unemployment, its people well fixed with the world's goods and business people enjoying good patronage and demand with some lines they still profess they are unable to meet is not a prosperous place today—even if some of us may be a little unhappy over the recession to normalcy from the unnatural war boom.

We may have a seasonal quiet for two or three months between now and spring but we know that our basic industries are due for a good year if for no other reason than the still unfilled demands not. only of the home but the world markets.

The lumber industry has still a lot of unfilled orders to catch up with as the whole country cries for building materials. That will keep the men busy in the mills and in the woods.

The demand of the world for food will keep the fishing industry at a high economic level and agricultural products will still be in strong demand.

The year 1946 was the best our mining industry has had since before the war. All signs point to 1947 being an even more active year in reopening such coastal areas as Portland Canal and Alice Arm. There should also be a real revival in the central interior as long inactive properties command renewed attention and steps proceed to open up and develop new properties.

Our basic industries are in a very promising condition and they reflect their healthy state in the prosperity of the distributing and administrative centre of Prince Rupert.

We have mentioned nothing about the more problematical possibilities of increased shipping through Prince Rupert as a result of the expanding use of the port for Alaska traffic, possible grain shipping or even transPacific commerce which, although having suffered temporary setbacks, are by no means to be ruled out. We have not speculated on what may ensue from the clarification of the disposition of the great war established facilities here and hereabouts. Nor have we counted upon what may result from the extensive surveys that are now being made in connection with the possibility of a new major industry, involving not only this port and Port Edward but the whole lower Skeena Valley. If any of these things develop, they will be all to the good, over and above what we may surely expect from a normal use and development of already established and developing basic exploitation of our natural resources.

We think of the situation from all angles and, although to be sure things may not have been moving as rapidly we might have hoped for, we can see no reason for pessimism or uneasiness about the future—immediate or long range—of Prince Rupert.

A reactionary is anyone who talks about real wages.

Council's Burden

F THE INAUGURAL address of our lady mayor may be taken as the keynote, the new city council is resolutely setting itself to the job ahead with realism and courage. Mrs. Arnold accepts the position that, unless some immediate and permanent improvements are made, heads will fall "including our own." She and her council know that the public is becoming increasingly impatient about the disgraceful condition of the city's facilities and services such as streets, waterworks and sewers and that even the most valid of excuses for nothing being done to improve them will not be accept-

In other words, the 1947 city council is "on the spot" for sure and it must get some- * thing done or take the consequences. It must not only try. It must do. It is not going to be good enough to tell us there is no money. If there is no money, something must be done about obtaining it and that without further delay. Financing looks at the moment to be a major prob-

Political Situation

AR. KING was 72 last month. He has put forth a rumor, and even said it himself, that he wishes to retire.

The difficulty confronting Canada is that, to date, no one else has appeared in any party around whom the electorate can rally.

Liberal deterioration, if such there be, is not reflected in the country. The Gallup poll, which has not yet been wrong, reports the relative position of the three major parties to be unchanged.

The Canadian people are no more inclined to vote Socialist now than earlier.

The Bracken party has failed to exploit the weaknesses of their opponents. It is now four years since Mr. Bracken became the leader.
