British Government Is Struggling to Avert Industrial Disaster-Penalties Are Imposed

LONDON (P-Under drastic new electricity conservation regulations, Great Britain today continued the battle to avert industrial disaster while the weather remained as severe as ever.

Violation of the regulation five-hour electricity cut period daily is made punishable by Taw, Prime Minister Attlee Graydon (Progressive-Conservato $2000 or two years in prison under wartime defence regulatiens.

Fifty thousand troops are livery, James Sinclair (Liberal, helping to move coal along North Vancouver) said that, in the ice-jammed transportation channels, acting under a umbia, the average number of War Office order to "clear the coal with all available means."

Prime Minister Attlee told the House of Canadioned today that Britain's fuel crisis was "very critical" and added that sufficient fuel for nine days' consumption in average weather conditions remains if the present government restrictions are kept in force. He reported that savings in coal consumption rose steadily over the first three days of cuts.

Forty-seven colliers have managed to leave northern harbors, carrying 100,000 tons of coal to starved southern ports. Twelve ships, carrying 20,000 tons of coal, reached London during the last 24

A shortage of fuel gas in the country now appears to be developing owing to the coal shortage and householders are being urged to conserve as far as possible.
