Famous Old Mine Sold

Silver Standard to Undergo $195,000 Development Program

An extensive program of development and operation is planned for the old Silver Standard mine at Hazelton following sale of the entire property by the original owners for $150,000 to a new mining syndicate of Vancouver men and associates, known as Silver Standard Mines Ltd.

It is estimated that an expenditure of $195,000 will be needed for a program of development, additional plant and housing, installation of a fully modern mill and for working capital. Present indications reported by well-known mining engineers who have at various times examined the property or have been associated with companies which have operated it show that there is in the neighborhood of 40,0000 tons of ore blocked out, with over a mile of underground development ready for operation. It is fully expected that the mine can be put in operation with less than a month of preparation and already some machinery has been shipped to the mine by the new owners.

The property consists of 14 crown-granted mineral claims and 245 claims held by location. The old workings of the mine are in excellent condition, some levels as dry today as the day the mine closed down. There are 10 definite mineral veins and the mine is partially developed on four levels, and altogether offers a fine set-up under existing higher base metal prices.

In charge of the new development program for the company is Ridgeway W. Wilson, M.E., who is also included in the syndicate along with R. R. Wilson, M.E., formerly mining engineer for the Trites-Wood-Wilson Syndicate; W. R. Wilson & Sons; of St. Eugene Mining Corporation; W. C. Ditmars, Sr., and W. C. Ditmars, Jr.; A. M. Whiteside, K.C., of Vancouver; W. J. Pitman, retired merchant

NAAS RIVER'S RECORD COLD

Even Oldest Natives Cannot Recall Any Winter More Severe Than This Has Been

The Nass River country has been having its coldest winter in at least a half a century, reports Chief Councillor Johnson Russ of Greenville, who is a visitor in the city. The minimum thermometer reading at Greenville was 24 below zero. There is ice three feet thick at Greenville and, as far down as Mill Bay, the river has been frozen solidly across which is something few, if any, of even the oldest natives can recall. Snow is also exceptionally deep with six feet at Greenville and a reported twelve feet further up at Aiyansh.

The people of Greenville had expected to have their new sawmill in operation this winter but they will have to wait until spring because the severe winter weather has made it impossible for them to transport up the river heavy mill parts which are still at Prince Rupert awaiting shipment.

One of the early civic improvements to which the village of Greenville is looking forward is a water system.

Slim was brought in to Burns Lake Hospital but died at 3:15 early on Saturday morning. Deceased has one son, Joe, 12 years old. His wife died when Joe was born.

PREDICT BOOST IN FLOUR PRICE

Further Upward Trends Seen in Local Retail Market

Predictions are current in food handling circles that flour prices are due for a decided increase, despite governmental assurances that the recently approved 30 cent a bushel increase in the domestic price of wheat would not be passed along to the consumer. To date, however, flour prices are among the few that have not increased progressively since the end of the war.

Further increases in the price of lard and shortening, possibly as much as 15 cents a pound, are anticipated by some within the next six months. Soap recently jumped two cents a cake for face and laundry cake types, while powdered soap was increased six cents a box.

1. Dusty bulbs and shades reduce light considerably.
2. A flared shade provides far more reading light than a straight, narrow one.
3. White or pastel shade linings afford more light than dark-coloured materials.
4. Light should be placed so that everyone is served to the best advantage.
5. There should be no dark shadows or corners in rooms where people read.
6. An unshaded lamp causes glare, reducing ability to see or read properly.
7. Bulbs of adequate strength should be used in all sockets.
8. Light should fall over opposite shoulder to writing side.

Have adequate and proper lighting in the kitchen as well as in the living and study rooms. Porch and stairway lights help prevent accidents, and burglars will avoid a cheerful, well-lit house.
