James Hampton, who arrived at Prince Rupert long before incorporation and remained active in local affairs for years, has been finding it necessary to spend much of his time at home because of failing health. In pioneer times, it was no trick at all to go out among the loftiest of hills and bowl over mountain goat or deer.

Aged Fisherman Passes Away Here

Angel Larson, 77-year-old retired fisherman, died in Prince Rupert General Hospital on Friday after a brief illness. He had been a resident of the Prince Rupert district for a number of years, and, prior to his death, had lived aboard his boat, the Laura L., at Cow Bay. He was unmarried. He is survived by a brother, E. B. Larson, of Vancouver, who is due to arrive in the city Sunday night. The funeral will be held on Monday at Grenville Court Chapel, with Rev. A. O. Aasen officiating.

Hotel... arrivals

Tom Barton is back in northern B.C. according to a friend who met him recently in the Prince George country. Barton, who is an older soldier, lived in Prince Rupert for quite a while, being a member of the Post Office staff, and will be remembered. He was in the Orient during the last war.

EXTENSION OF TERRACE POWER

TERRACE — Terrace still is awaiting completion of installation and putting into operation by the British Columbia Power Commission of its new power plant which will greatly step up the output of light and power and permit of the further extension of service within and beyond the corporate limits of the village.

One 240 h.p. and one 80 h.p. diesel engine are already in place at the new power plant at the east end of the railway yards and there is another 240 h.p. engine to come.

With the opening up of the new plant, the old one, with its two Caterpillar diesel engines, will be closed down.

Some 60 or 70 local subscribers are anxiously waiting for their connections so that local communication will be possible for the first time and also connection into the long distance exchange.
