"CLEANING UP" ON BERLIN'S COAL SHORTAGE—One of the major worries of Berliners in the western zone may again be the heating of their homes in winter. Last winter, due to the Russian blockade the allies were able to distribute only 40 pounds of coal to each family. But there's at least one who hopes that the blockade continues—John Klatt, the nine-year-old dead-end kid who has been profiteering on the coal crisis. He's the "grosshandler" who buys coal from the "glaners" who scavenge the tracks between Tempelhof airfield and the huge coal from the "gleaners" who scavenge the trac area. The photo on the left shows young Master Klatt (centre), smoking one of his customary cigarets, transacting a deal for coal with two members of his gang. Of late their operations have gone past the gleaning stage and the kids, ranging up to 15 years old, actually get aboard the trains and heave their loot on to the tracks. The right-hand photo shows one of the gang flipping coal to his waiting colleagues while on the lookout for the armed guards who have been stationed on the trains. Klatt hires them on a percentage basis and then resells the coal at a good profit. Dodging school when he can on a "good" day he makes 11 marks.

PAINT-UP TIME—Holidays are now on but the average Canadian homemaker will soon be cleaning the house from top to bottom before the long winter months. Summer clothes are cleaned and stored, before moths have a chance to get at them and the home in general takes on a fresh new appearance after the cleaning and paint-up jobs. Painting the kitchen chair, as this lady is doing, is a job that is done in many a household.
