Speeding Up!

WE ARE GLAD to be advised by the secretary of the Prince Rupert Automobile Association that he has seen as minister of public works in the south and has found Mr. Carson "most conversant with and appreciative of" the highway situation here.

Almost two years ago we were promised that the road would be straightened out and blacktopped between Prince Rupert and Port Edward in plenty of time before the pulp mill started operations.

There may be little point in wondering why the road should be in the state it is at this late date and why the reconstruction work has still a long way to go. We do know, however, that speed is the essence of the contract now and, if the straightening out and the blacktopping is to be done by the time the mill is ready next year, there will have to be a lot more speed put on the job than there has been in the last two years.

GETTING COASTGUARD

WHILE WE might have been thinking of having for Canada a coastguard of the ambitious scale of the United States, it is quite possible that existing facilities of the Royal Canadian Navy, Royal Canadian Air Force and Royal Canadian Mounted Police might be co-ordinated so as to render an immediate and effective service in time of need.

Of course, the matter of providing and co-ordinating the facilities is only the first step. There will have to be distribution and advantageous placing of the facilities which must not be all concentrated around Victoria and Vancouver.

"WHO'S WINNING?"

WE ARE FREQUENTLY reminded that we are engaged in a "cold war." Most after-dinner speakers these days will tell us seriously and solemnly that this war is one of ideas, and that it is being fought for "the minds of men."

If we agree that one of our tasks is to resist the breakdown of the Christian principles of conduct and belief which form the backbone of a democratic society of responsible individuals, and if we believe that it is also part of our task to encourage the development of those same principles in the minds and hearts of the new generations, then we must admit that we are fighting a losing battle.

We cannot hope to win a "cold war," a "hot war," or any other kind of a war involving ideological conflict by force of arms alone. We must, if we are to be victorious, look to our moral rearmament. Just as the limbs of the human body wither and become useless without exercise, so too does our belief in and desire for liberty atrophy and die unless it is kept bright and shining with a constant faith.

SATURDAY SERMON

ON BEING TEACHABLE

(Rev. Lawrence G. Sieber, First United Church)

Those who came under Jesus' most intimate influence called him "Teacher." His mind and heart were full of things they desired to learn. That they might learn all Jesus sought to develop was a teachable temper within them.

The humble-minded know that they do not know it all and so are willing to learn. The know-it-alls take the illusion for the real thing and miss much of the joy and meaning of life.

This is the last day of Education Week and it behoves us all to be humble-minded—teachable—every day of every week. But of course it can be as we say: "you can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink."

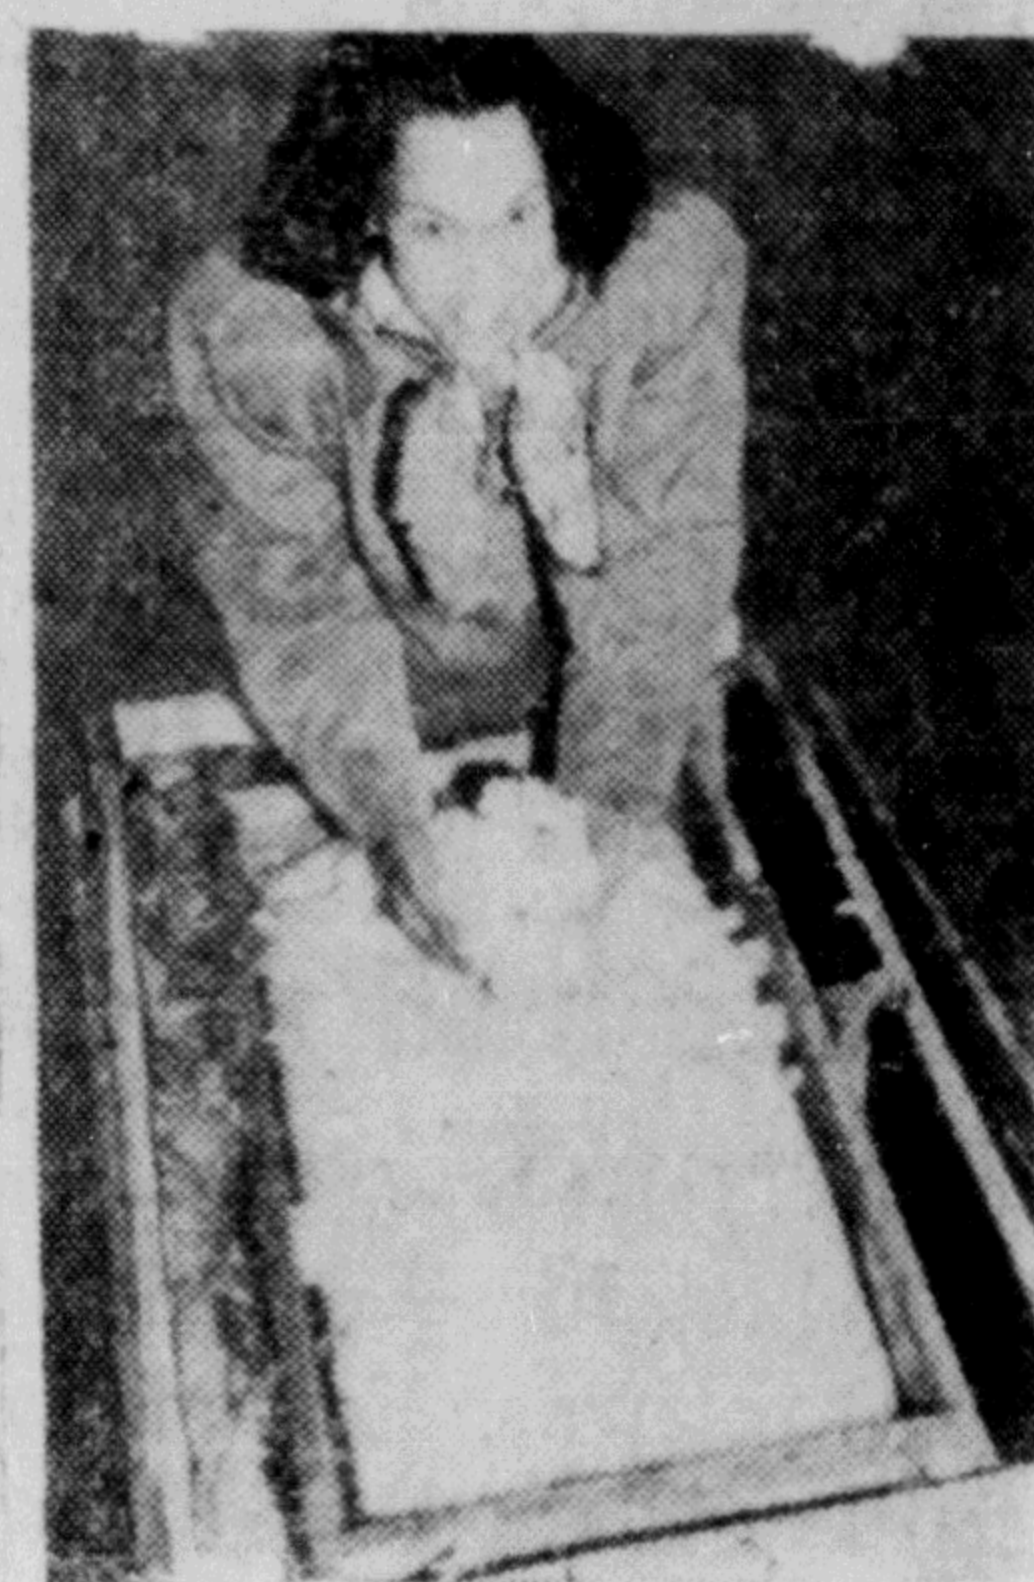

Jesus said to Philip: Have I been so long time with you and you have not known me? We are in need of this teachable spirit. A man wrote some years ago: "receptive ability of the masses is very limited, their understanding is small, their forgetfulness is great."

To be teachable we need to remember our misjudgments and our mistakes for they make us humble-minded. In our daily living and little tasks we make mistakes. Often we realize it and try to profit by them.

ENGLAND IMPORTS NORWEGIAN SNOW—This is getting to be a habit! In Tokyo, Japan, they carted snow from a mountain, spread it on a ski-jump and held a ski meet. In the recent F.I.S. world championship contests in New England, they hauled crushed ice and spread it on the ski jump. And here, in London, Eng., is one of 35 crates of snow imported from Norway to put on a ski jump at Hampstead Heath.

I have heard some people say: "my responsibility is to look after my business, study to make a success of it, and to provide for my family." It isn't as simple as that. We are a part of the whole we must work and learn as a part of all society.

Then the Great Teacher has a word for us: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." We need to be teachable toward God. In the wilderness Judea as he was about to begin his life work, Jesus listened to the voices of the past, of others and of God. He heard: "Thou shalt not live by bread alone... Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." You cannot have two masters: God and mammon. Because he was teachable he went forth in the power of the spirit and angels came and ministered unto him. "Happy are the humble-minded—the teachable—for they shall possess the land of the living."
