Thanksgiving

WE MAY NOT think we have a great deal to be thankful for but, still and all, we have.

We look at the alarming world situation and feel that things are not so good as they were a year ago. Yet, they might be worse—a good deal worse—and there is still hope that they may improve. In fact, things have been looking better the past short while.

Looking at our own home scene, do we realize or admit how well off we are in this fine land of ours? Indeed, we have much to be thankful for and our greatest blessing is that we are citizens of a favored country. If we do not appreciate our own lot, we might reflect on how many people in the world would be mighty glad to be in our free and democratic shoes.

And the people of Prince Rupert, dwelling in the midst of activity, prosperity and good living, are doubly blessed. We may have our troubles some times and our perplexing problems but, after all, in comparison, how small they really are!

Yes we Canadians in this favored area of the Dominion have much more to be thankful than they have to mourn about. In fact, there is little justification for complaint.

LET'S WAKE UP

IT IS something to be wondered at that, while the rest of the coast is actively interesting itself in the matter of disaster emergency organization, Prince Rupert should be so complacent and so unconcerned.

No doubt, it is the possibility of war conditions recurring and this coast being a possible target that actuates the organization of civilian defence measures which there would not be time to organize in these exposed areas after the war commenced.

Then, apart from war, there are other possibilities of disaster, fire, disease or such like.

It is not a very creditable commentary on the realistic thinking of the people of Prince Rupert that there should be a diffidence or an unwillingness on their part to participate in disaster precaution measures such as the Red Cross is endeavouring to organize on a province-wide basis.

TERRACE RIGHT

TERRACE Board of Trade has heard a complaint from one of its leading members that Terrace is one of the few towns of its size in the province where there is no hard surfaced arterial highway. Prince Rupert can expect more work along this line. And there are other towns along Highway 16 too that might have similar complaint.

But why stop at the sections of the arterial highways that go through the municipalities? We and our highways are being neglected until we get the hard surfacing all along the way.

Mr. Little's complaint before the Terrace Board of Trade is a point well taken. More power to the representations along this line to the public works department. Let them be vigorous and persistent!

GOD'S PROGRAM

By human standards the love of God is beyond understanding. It is revealed in the person of Jesus Christ whose life so often contradicted the standards of society. Human standards of conduct frequently breed a sort of smugness and complacency that destroy the finer and more noble humanities. We live under the code of human conduct which varies in different localities. Basically most of the accepted regulations are essentially selfish and our actions consist of whatever may repay us the greatest satisfaction.

While living under these conditions, God extends to us a call. He informs us that He has a different type of life for us to enjoy and this new type of life is based on His love. This new type of life consists of self-denial and self-surrender. Instead of having a life that is motivated by self, this new type of life is based on God's love first to me and then to others. How strange not to consider one's self! Can there be any satisfaction in that kind of life? The Lord answers by asking that we prove Him and then see if His ways are not the most satisfying.

What are the elements of self denial that God asks of us? There are several listed in the Bible. In the Letter to the Ephesians the Apostle Paul tells us that we should "walk in all lowliness and meekness." Certainly it is natural to be proud. Who doesn't enjoy the acclaim of his fellowmen? Can there be any satisfaction in being humble? Try it and be convinced. God's love as it is reflected in your new life gives satisfaction beyond measure. For where there is true humility there is also an end of petty bickering. Strife generated by selfish interests is gone. A far happier and more satisfying life is enjoyed.

Then we are told to exercise patience. The words "with long-suffering, forbearing one another in love" describe how this is to be done. It isn't true that all followers of Christ are truly patient. Many haven't progressed that far. Those who have, find that they have the secret of an inner peace. Patience brings its reward of greater tranquility and adds to the sum of happiness. Since we are called to a life where patience is to be the rule in our conduct, we are to base it on God's love. Where we lack the necessary self-control to be patient, we can find help in the love of God. For God's love is a stabilizing influence.

God really has a wonderful program for us to follow. It requires that we express in conduct the fact that while we live in this world we are not living for this world. No calling in life can equal the one that God issues when He asks us to become the sons of God. It however has responsibility attached. While we
