There was some concern felt lately, for the Alaska fishing vessel Sunset, the boat having failed to return to port within the usual time. The U.S. Coast-guard started a search. The Sunset, however, showed up in course of time, explaining that there had been no particular reason for anyone to worry. Her skipper is Andy Frederickson.

The first ship in twenty-five years to dock at an Alaskan port of entry, directly from Japan, tied up in Skagway a few days ago to pick up surplus equipment from the Canol project for delivery in San Francisco. The vessel was the Swarthmore Victory, 7,000 tons.

Wedding Is Outstanding

Nuptials of Miss Zona Hedley and Orme Stuart of Widespread Interest

An outstanding late summer social event took place before a large congregation in St. Andrew's Anglican Cathedral at 8:30 last evening when Miss Zona Hedley, daughter of Mrs. James P. Hedley of Oak River, Manitoba, became the bride of Orme Gordon Stuart, son of A. G. Stuart of Vancouver. Rev. Basil S. Prockter, rector of the Cathedral, performed the ceremony before the chancel which was beautifully decorated with white gladioli and early fall flowers.

The bride, who entered the Cathedral to the strains of the Wedding March played by the church organist, Peter Lien, was given in marriage by B. R. Dodds of Terrace. She was indeed a lovely picture in her ivory satin wedding gown with sweetheart neckline, beaded bodice and full skirt. Her floor length veil was held in place with a coronet of orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was made up of white carnations and gladioli.

Two charming bridesmaids were the Misses Sheila and Isla Ramsay. The former wore pink net over taffeta with matching cap and her bouquet was of pink carnations. The latter wore blue net over taffeta with matching cap and her bouquet was of yellow carnations.

W. D. Lambie was groomsmen. Acting as ushers were W. M. Watts, Dr. A. W. Large, J. T. Harvey and G. C. Mitchell.

Following the service, many friends of the couple gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W.

D. Lambie for a reception. The rooms were beautifully decorated and the bride and groom received congratulations and best wishes before the fireplace which was adorned with red briar roses.

Toast to the bride was proposed by B. R. Dodds and responded to by the groom.

Assisting the hostess were Mrs. N. Orme Catt and Mrs. G. C. Withers, who poured, and Mrs. Margaret Carignan, Mrs. Peter Peterson, Mrs. Hans Peterson, Miss Dorothy Kergin, Miss Dorothy Macdonald and Miss Evelyn Macdonald.

The bride and groom cut a handsome three-tier wedding cake.

Later in the evening the couple sailed on the Prince Rupert for Vancouver on a three weeks' honeymoon tour which will take them through the southern and central interior.

The bride's going away costume was a dusty rose gabardine suit with navy accessories.

On their return to Prince Rupert Mr. and Mrs. Stuart will take up residence at 1919 Atlin Avenue.

The couple are well known and highly popular. The bride has for some time been a member of the staff of Orme's Drugs Limited in which the groom learned his profession as a pharmacist and eventually became the proprietor. He served with distinction in the Royal Canadian Navy during World War II, becoming a commander, assuming command of destroyers in the North Atlantic and winning the Distinguished Service Cross.

Modern Etiquette

Q. When one finds himself in a predicament where a "white lie" will extricate him, isn't the lie justified?

A. No. It is better to tell the truth and face the consequences. The only justification for a "white lie" would be to protect another from injury, or give happiness to the person who is burdened.

Q. How can one overcome extreme self-consciousness when in the company of a group of persons?

A. Really the only remedy is to think less about one's self, devoting one's entire attention to the other persons present.

Q. Would it be all right for a debutante to wear a pink gown at her coming-out party?

A. White is the most appropriate color.

There is some evidence that English firms are making a determined assault on the gadget front. Latest indication of this is a little machine designed to help the housewife mince up her vegetables in rapid style. It is specifically recommended for cutting herbs and eggs to shreds. It is a handled, nickel-plated affair equipped with a guard that keeps the herbs or vegetables in their place instead of wrapping themselves around the axle.

Remember when angel food cakes were the pride of nearly every lady cook? A number of factors including the shortage of special tins required for the baking resulted in almost a total eclipse of that "heavenly" food. But for the lack of a pan a cake need not be lost now. Bigger (and apparently better) angel cake pans are now on sale in local stores. An added feature of these utensils is the way the side flaps apart when a catch is released.

Plastic clothes pins, in a variety of hues and fitted with stainless steel springs, appeared on the market during the war but their price kept them from making a hit with the ladies. They are beginning to appear again on the local market with price tags that put them closer to their wooden rival's class.

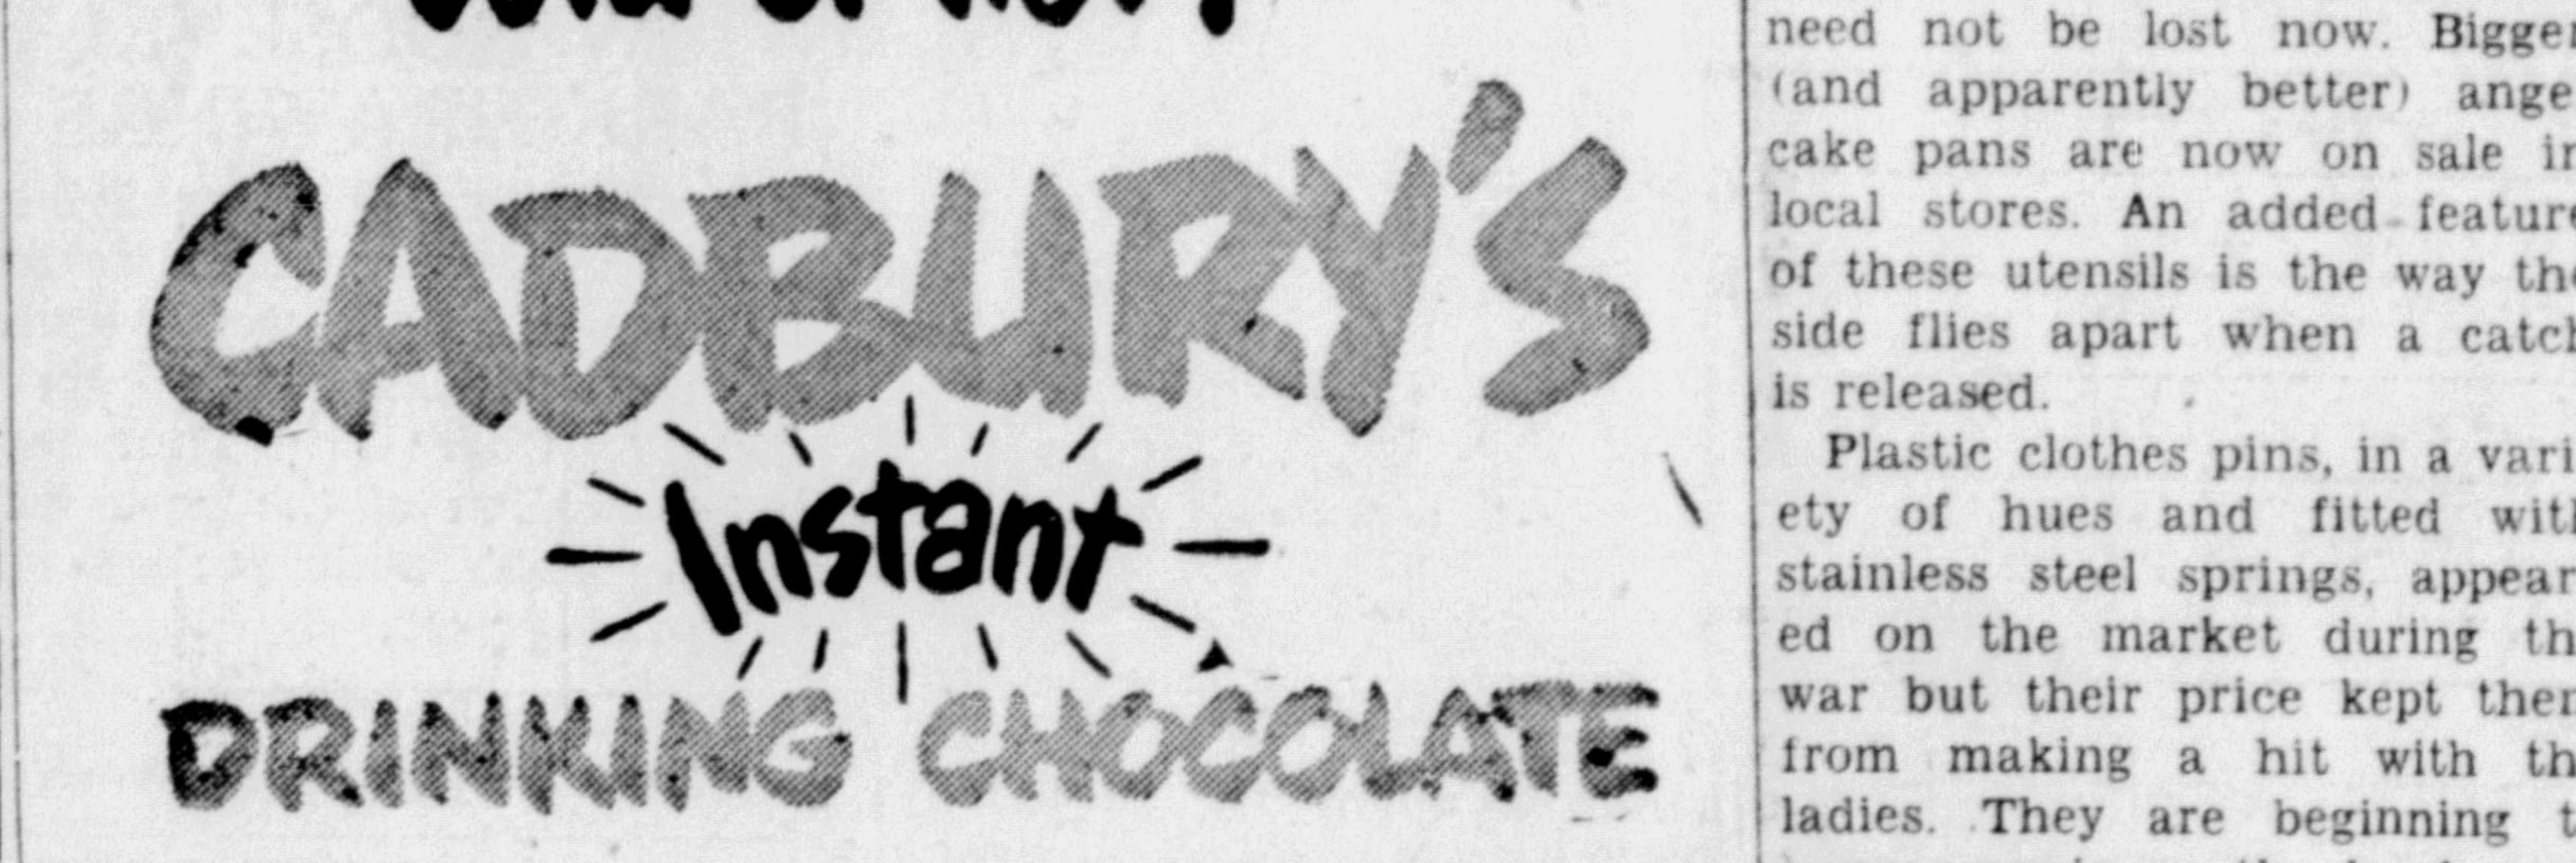

The long and the short of it. You can see them both in ladies' styles, especially where coats are concerned. One of the latest in the shortie parade is the gabardine raincoat that ends its protection about midway between hip and knee. Young ladies, apparently, find the shorty raincoat a handy garment, particularly suited for wear with slack suits.

It is no secret that Canadian culture is largely undeveloped. For time to time there are proposals for the creation of a national theatre or for the expansion of the national art gallery but, in the realm of Canadian literature, there is only one way the individual can help encourage native authors — buy their books, when you know they have something worthwhile to tell about this truly great land.

The Great Foundry Victory

The foundry-workers' union in Vancouver demands the highest hourly wage-rates in Canada. The dispute went to a conciliation board and the union leaders won. It was a great victory.

Today, two years later, a foundry-worker still gets those high wages—but the industry gives work to only one-tenth as many men as before. Vancouver's foundry industry is practically dead. The promise of a B.C. industry with jobs for thousands of men has not been fulfilled.

Few members of the union affected happened to be Communists. But their top leadership is of the Party. These leaders ignored protests that the wage demands would force the foundries out of business. The extra money they said, could come out of profits. But the profits were there—production costs had soared, prices had to be raised, and the B.C. foundries could no longer compete with those farther East working just as efficiently and at lower costs.

Some foundries were forced to close down; others had to cut their payrolls to the bone and lose good men. The union leaders had won—but for 90 per cent of the foundry workers it was a hollow victory.

Must this experience be repeated in other industries or will management and labor work together to prevent B.C.'s payrolls?
