Come On, Good People

ME HOPE that all the good people of Prince Rupert are giving to the utmost of their reasonable ability to the British Columbia Flood Emergency Fund and that the consciences of all are clear in the matter or will be without further delay. The Premier of the Province has said that the need is much greater than was estimated when the drive was started and that a great deal more then a million dollars is required to meet specific sels visit Prince Rupert on that Northern B.C. Power Co. exigencies of this—the greatest disaster that has day. ever befallen the people of British Columbia.

The time of the drive is being extended. Prince Rupert set a high objective and it is still short by more than half of being achieved. There has been some comment, mostly probably by those who are looking for an excuse not to do their share in helping screly stricken British Columbians, that the objective was too high. After all it is only $25,000, and, for well-off and prosperous Prince Rupert area, we do not think that is by any means too high if everyone would give as they could and should.

Once again we emphasize the terrible affliction which has created a great and immediate cause transcending all others the appeal to provide assistance to the thousands of sufferers and victims of the awful floods which have shattered the homes, destroyed the livelihoods and broken the hopes and hearts of fellow British Columbians.

Here in happy Prince Rupert we are secure and comfortable in our homes. We have not even had velt. to go out and man the dykes as hundreds of men on the lower mainland are doing. All we have to do is to raise a self-set quota of $25,000. We can do it if we all give what we should without mean, selfish evasion or equivocation. If we have not gone the limit we should do so at once, either by sending in our full initial subscription or by adding to that already made.

IN PORT DIRECTORY

MINTH EDITION of "Canadian Ports and Ship-N ping Directory," a publication designed to provide complete information for shipmasters and others desiring to know the facilities available at over 300 Canadian ports, has made its appearance. It also tabulates services, rates, etc., at these various ports. The directory is compiled by Frederick William Wallace, noted marine authority and writer, and is published by National Business Publications of Gardenvale, Quebec.

Prince Rupert gets an adequate amount of space and the port's facilities are satisfactorily outlined in considerable detail. There is one notable error, however, and that is a flat statement that "there are no motor truck roads out of the port" when it is probably meant that there are no regularly franchised trucking services. Surely an authority of the eminence of Capt. Wallace should have heard of the Prince Rupert Highway which connects the port with the main highways of the continent and, starting out over which, we can drive-even a truck—to any place in Canada or the United States that is accessible to the main highways.

It is gratifying to note that the port of Port Edward with its great dock is also given due mention with reference to the Celanese Corporation of America's big cellulose pulp mill undertaking there.

IT MIGHT HAPPEN HERE

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY persons have per-U ished in a Danish passenger vessel striking a mine and sinking in the Kattegat, the strait at the entrance of the Baltic Sea between Sweden and Denmark. That is a long way from Prince Rupert but it is not beyond the realm of possibility that a similar disaster might occur right here on the British Columbia coast.

Numerous live Japanese mines have already drifted over to the British Columbia coast, some of them right into "Inside Passage" waters. Only a few weeks ago such a mine was spotted right on the frequent course of a certain coastal liner which, however, had gone a different way that day. Other vessels have even been reported to have come close up to the floating explosives.

Possibly ,as we have been told, there is nothing very much to worry about, what with the small element of chance and the safeguards with which modern vessels are equipped, but the incident in the Kattegat makes us reflect that some people at least would feel a little more secure on dark nights at sea if they knew that all possible steps were being taken to protect the coast by adequate anti-mine and mine disposal services and a coastguard service worthy of the importance of this coast and its shipping.

You'll find that the big potatoes are on top of the heap because there's a lot of little ones holding them up there.
