JOHNNY'S JOTTINGS (Continued from page 2)

day a gentleman advertised that his home was for sale. Wanted $6,000. Had 20 calls.

"Quite a joke," remarked Mr. Thompson absorbed in thought.

"Yet homes," continued Mr. Johnson, "cost quite a bit these days. Carpenters, plumbers, tin-smiths, electricians all want high wage. Lumber prices are sky high and the lumber is just as hard to reach."

"Did you say you brought some binoculars along?" interrupted Mr. Thompson.

"Why yes," Mr. Johnson twined an eyebrow, his face questioning.

"Can I have them please," Mr. Thompson said. "I've never had a good view of the city. Be a good time now. The sun sets in a few minutes."

Binoculars in hand, Mr. Thompson gazed at the outstretched city. "Pretty powerful," he mused.

Mr. Johnson continued. "As I was saying, prices as they are these days, the total would be quite a figure."

Mr. Thompson's wrinkled hands twitched slightly as he grasped the binoculars tighter. "I agree... quite a figure!"

"In addition," Mr. Johnson went on, the people as a body...

"Quite a body," Mr. Thompson sighed. He collapsed.

Mrs. Hemming Dies In South

Word has been received in the city of the death in Victoria late last week of Mrs. Anne Hemming, wife of Robert Hemming, who for several years was a member of the typographical staff of the Daily News in Prince Rupert. She succumbed suddenly to a heart attack.

Mr. and Mrs. Hemming had resided in Prince Rupert on two separate occasions and were also for several years in Edmonton. Since leaving Prince Rupert during the war they have lived in Victoria where Mr. Hemming has followed his calling as a linotype operator.

"Yeah, pal, I see it," was the reply "But there's a lot of dopey signs around here. Lookit that one — WEAR DAMSELFORM BRASSIERES... Why should I pay attention to any of them?"

Students Marvel At Magic Feats

How do you pull bunnies, black and white at that, out of an empty stove pipe type object? Simple if you know how and children of Borden Street, King Edward and Conrad Street schools are probably still circulating their own theories of the subject. The matter began after Mitchell Cain, famous magician from Tacoma, staged an entertaining performance of mystery and comedy especially for the children at the various schools Wednesday.

Mr. Cain, a humorist in his own right, was assisted by his wife Gladys.

A disappearing egg trick kept students on their toes but one should have heard the squeals of delight after the quicker-than-the-eye artist produced the two black and white rabbits. Teachers had quite a time of it attempting to quell the noise and keep the youngsters in their seats.

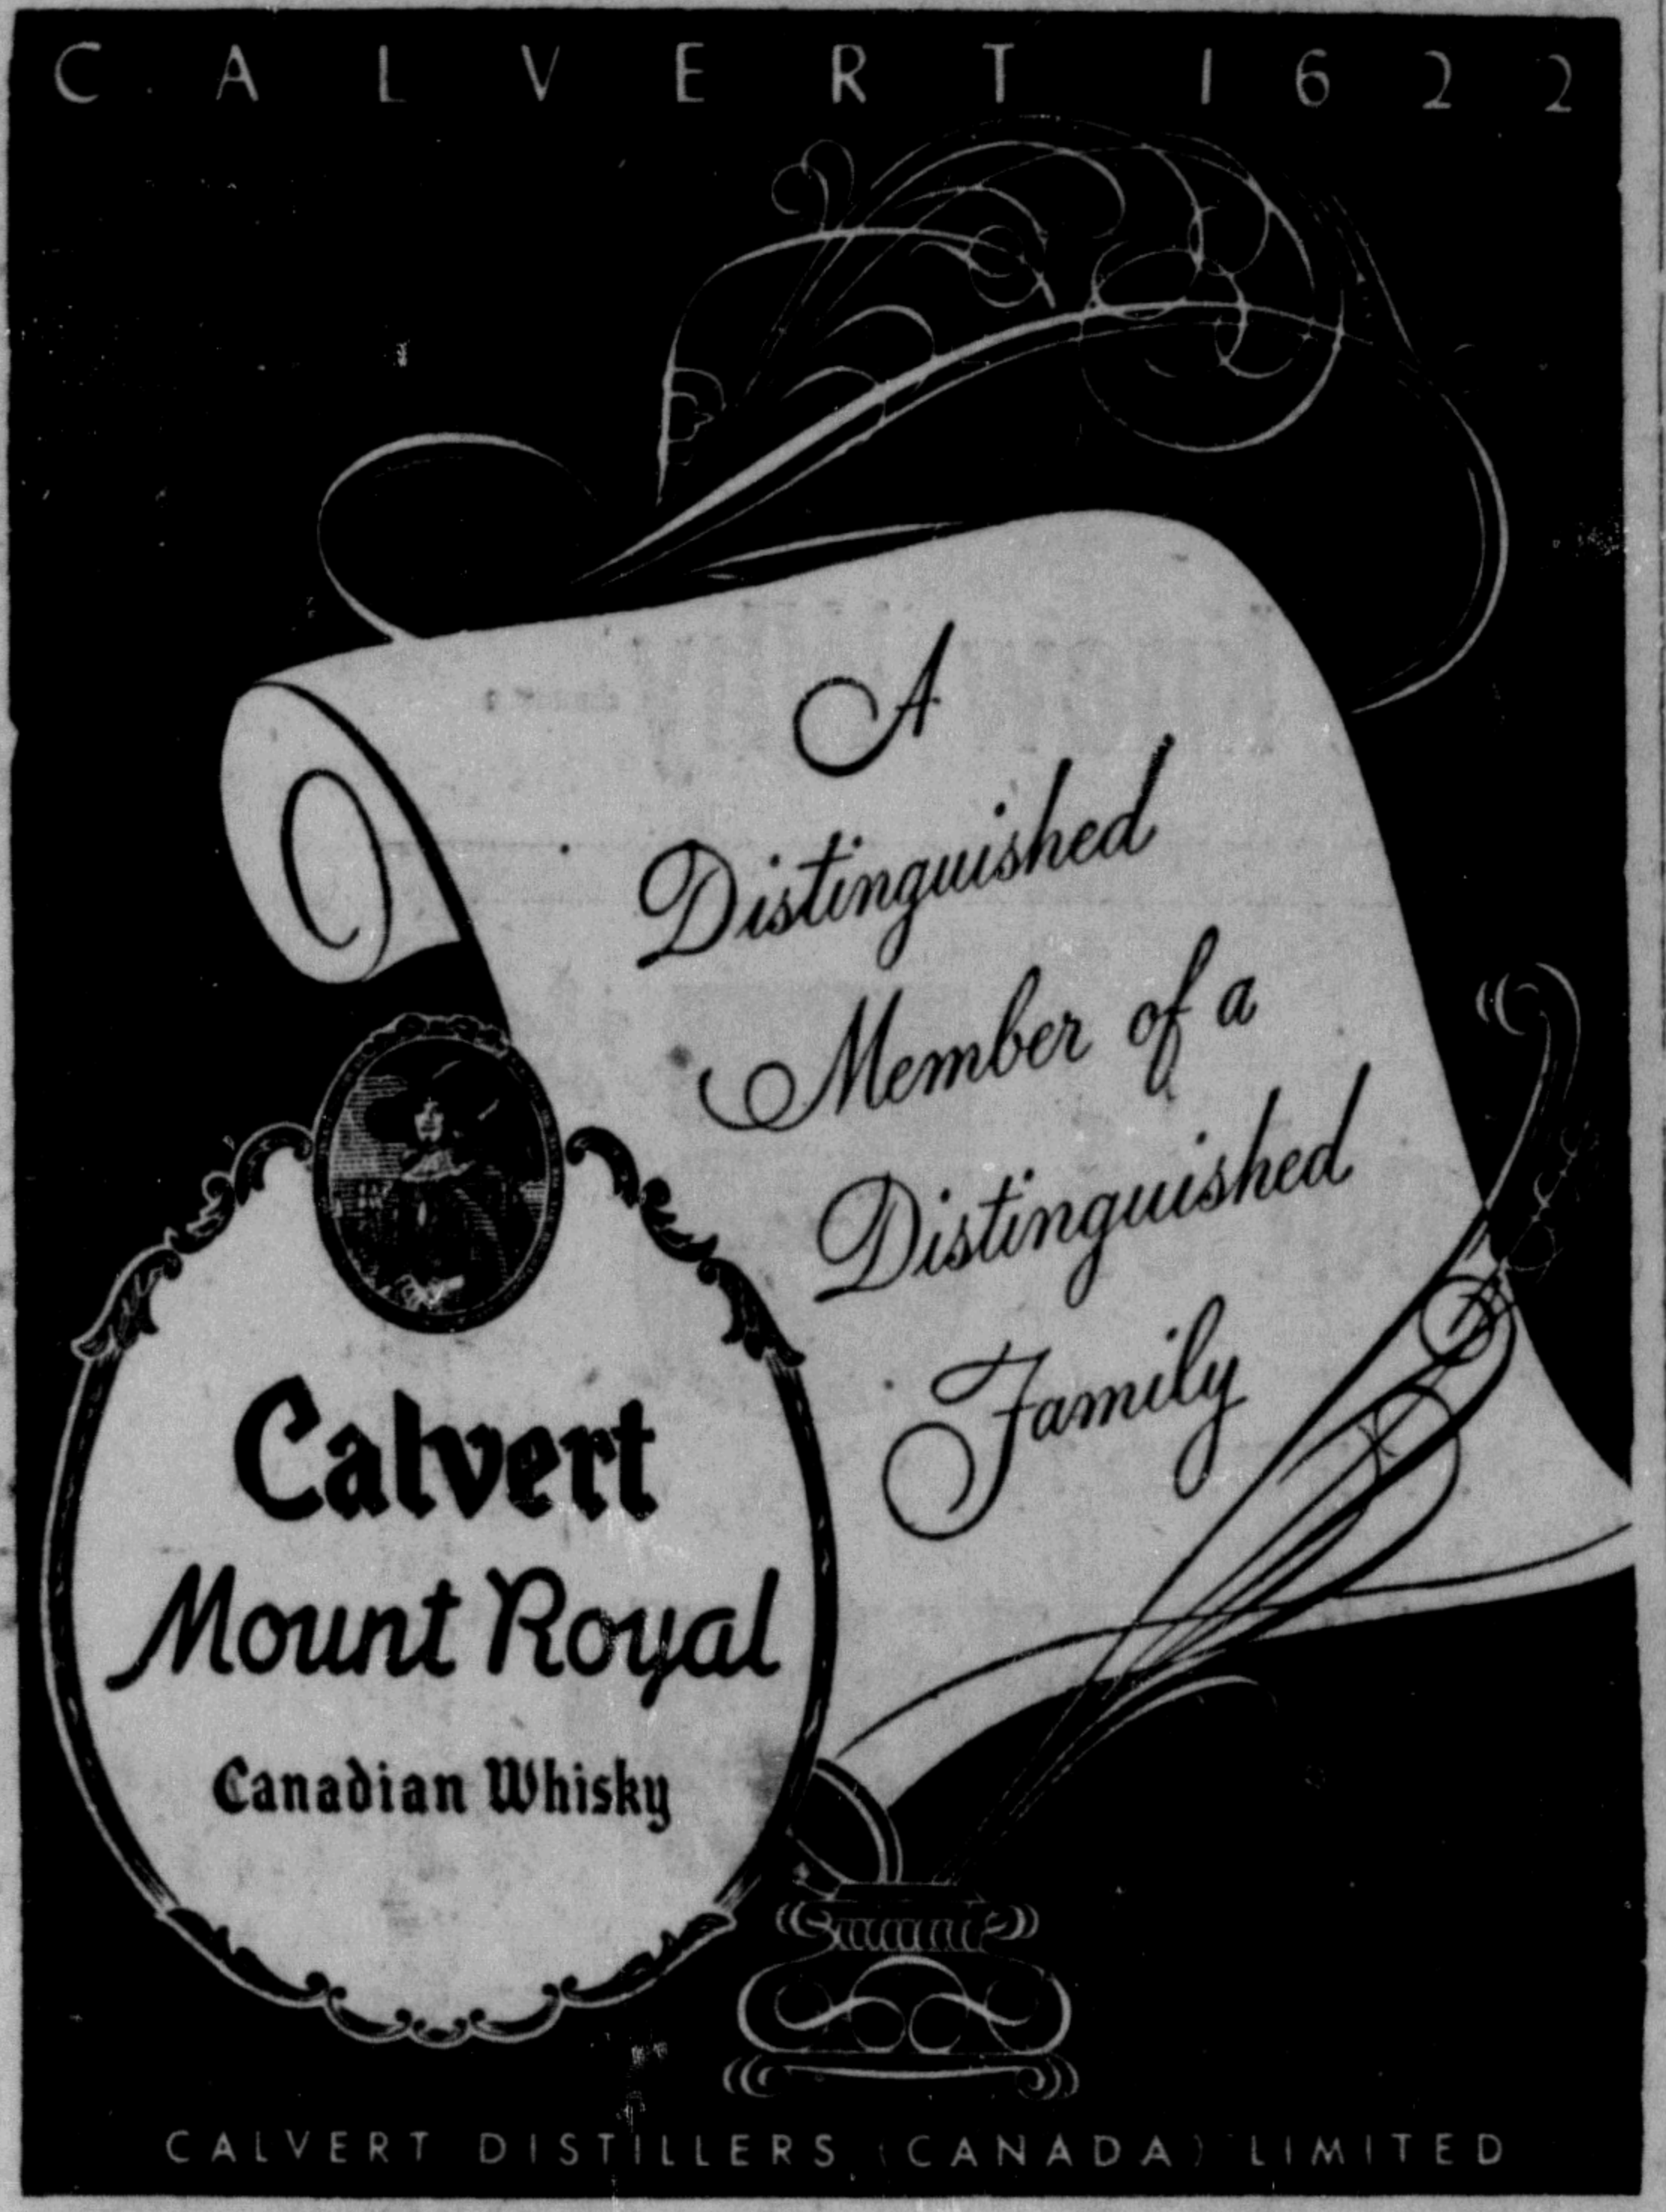

Incidentally, Mr. Cain's quicker-than-the-eye hand must have
