The Key Control

ABOLITION of exchange control would be equivalent to opening a free market for gold. Canada's gold mining industry would boom. Other industries would be put in a sounder position and there would no longer be need for any control of imports beyond that exercised by the customs tariff. Most important of all, Canadian industry would attract investment—domestic and foreign—on a vastly increased scale. In sum, the full benefit of the devaluation policy adopted last September would at last be felt; an artificial obstacle to the expansion of trade and industry would be removed.

There should be hardly any unemployment in Canada today beyond the inevitable minimum due to weather conditions and job-changing. Yet so accustomed have we become to war-necessitated controls of one sort or another that the abolition of the key control—the control of all controls—has apparently received scant consideration, although it is plainly hampering the return to a reasonably free economy. Nobody would pretend that exchange control is the sole cause of joblessness among Canadian workers; some of the workers themselves, badly advised, have priced their labor out of a market. But the return of freedom of international exchange would point up the other errors of public and private policy that are now obscured by the greater error and indicate their correction.

It should be worth trying, at least for an experimental period, as a high financial authority has suggested. No nation in the world can better afford than Canada can today to show its faith in a free economy. No nation's example would be more highly regarded by other nations which are disposed to take the same step. Some nation, some time, will lead the way; it might as well be Canada as any other.

REST—AN INVESTMENT

NOTHING could be further from the truth than to say that sleep is a loss of time. Sleep is a most important factor in our daily lives. During sleep, the body recuperates from the day's hardships; nervous tension disappears thereby inducing complete relaxation; during sleep, the heart works at a minimum. Such complete rest increases resistance to fatigue and disease and enables a better use of all faculties.

Some adults have died relatively young who would have enjoyed a much longer life span had they given proper attention to the importance of rest. Others may have failed in business or home duties because of a bad temper, or because of jumpy nerves because they tired easily. Lowered resistance due to overwork and lack of sufficient sleep very often predisposes to colds. Such troubles could well be avoided by taking more rest.

The average person requires a minimum of 8 hours sleep every night. For young children, an average of 12 to 14 hours is suggested; for adolescents, it should be at least 9 or 10, if at all possible.

SATURDAY SERMON

By Capt. W. C. Poulton (Salvation Army)
Text: They Were All With One Accord In One Place. Acts 2:1

On Thursday of this week we were celebrating the anniversary of a great day in the history of the Christian Church and an even greater day in the Divine Plan for all mankind who are either in or out of the church Ascension Day.

Jesus said to his followers that it was expedient that He go away from them. That was hard to understand and much harder to take. When He was taken from them in physical death on the Cross, the blow hit them so hard that they scattered and fled and hid behind closed doors. Peter, the bold brave fisherman, who drew his sword and would have started a scrap in the garden of Gethsemane, ran away to do some fishing and thus hide himself.

Then came the Easter Day of the Christian Church, and Jesus was with them again. Slowly, very slowly indeed at first, He re-grouped them again—proved

His resurrection. Talked with them and expounded the things that they had only understood imperfectly while He was in the flesh. It had been a wonderful experience for forty days. Not until all had been gathered back into the company and all had believed in His resurrection... even Thomas who wanted physical proof... did He tell them that He must leave them again.

Leave them! for the second time in six weeks! But what a different effect this time! At the Cross only a few could be found to watch Him die, whereas at the Ascension they followed Him out to His beloved Bethany and, after listening to further words of instruction and guidance, they were able to watch Him leave them in a cloud.

There was no scattering now, no cringing in fear behind closed doors, no rushing back to their fishing boats. Jesus, their Lord, had told them to tarry at Jerusalem for further instructions. What then could be more sensible than to start a prayer-meeting and wait on the Lord. The Prayer meeting lasted ten days and then came the Power that enabled these ordinary men to go out and do what had been denied even to their Lord during His earthly ministry, the power to sway crowds to believe on Jesus.

This is a day when prayer-meetings are not popular places. In fact this is a day when prayer itself is left to the minority—except in times of national disaster when there usually comes a demand for a national day of prayer—and all too often to those who are the paid ministers of the Church. These cowards who had run for cover at His Crucifixion, were brave prayer-meeting men after His Ascension. They were men with one accord and were willing to meet in one place.

Why??? They had met the risen Lord. Take away the fact of the resurrection and you will soon lose the desire for prayer.

We will be in the week of the celebration of the anniversary of that great prayer-meeting until next Sunday when we remind our hearts of the coming of The Holy Spirit to live with and in men.

LETTERBOX

Mrs. Elfert Appreciated

Editor, Daily News

It would be appreciated if you would permit space in your valuable columns to be used to publicly express the gratification of the Department of Transport for the very able manner in which Mrs. J. R. Elfert has carried on the joint duties of Harbor Master and Shipping Master of the Port of Prince Rupert during the past year, pending an official appointment.

Captain J. R. Elfert died on May 5 1949, after holding the important post of Harbour Master at the Port of Prince Rupert, for twenty-two years, with the exception of the period he served with the Royal Canadian Navy during world war II. Since her husband's untimely death, Mrs. Elfert has carried on most of his duties in a most efficient manner and has earned the respect and admiration of all the citizens of Prince Rupert.

Regulations require that a Shipping Master be in possession of a Certificate of Competency as a Master of a foreign-going steamship. In compliance with such regulations, the position of Harbour Master and Shipping Master at Prince Rupert has been thrown open to competition by residents of British Columbia who have this and other required
