Modern Etiquette

By ROBERTA LEE

Q. Is it correct to address a wedding invitation to "Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Wilton and Family"?

A. No; the words "and Family" are no longer used. An invitation should be sent to Mr. and Mrs. Wilton, and a separate invitation to each member of the family.

Q. I have noticed some people take a heaping teaspoonful of ice cream and then make several mouthfuls of it. Is this correct?

A. No; only enough ice cream for one mouthful should be taken at one time on the spoon.

Looking Back in SPORT - Reminiscences and Records

On an October afternoon back in 1923 Army and Notre Dame met in Brooklyn at Ebbets Field in an historic American football game.

It was in this game that the name, "The Four Horsemen," received its subconscious birth, to find life a year later. On a certain play Notre Dame's four flying backs came sweeping from the Rockne shift around Army's left end. The interference was headed by Harry Stuhldreher at quarter. Elmer Layden and Don Miller were part of the speedy compact attack with Jimmy Crowley carrying the ball. They had picked up twelve yards on the play before Crowley was finally forced out of bounds.

A year later Notre Dame swung into action against another strong Army team at the Polo Grounds.

It was at the start of the second period, with the score 0-0, Army dominating the earlier play, that Stuhldreher, Miller, Crowley and Layden came rushing out from the Notre Dame bench and set about earning their "Four Horsemen" name. There they were again—a backfield that ranged in weight from 155 to 163 pounds, an average displacement of 161 pounds, by many pounds the lightest in the starring ranks of football history.

What they lacked in mere poundage they more than made up for in speed, spirit, smartness and driving force. They worked with rhythm that was unbelievably beautiful to watch.

Notre Dame had the ball on her 20-yard line with Army goal 80 yards away. It was here that the swift, striking stampede started. Crowley picked up 15 yards on the first play. Layden and Miller added 16 more. A pass from Stuhldreher to Crowley gathered 12 just before Don Miller's 20-yard sprint carried him to Army's 10-yard line. Over cracked Layden for the first touchdown—80 yards in just seven plays.

It should be noted here that "The Seven Mules" who made up Notre Dame's forward wall, headed by such stars as Adam Walsh and Rip Miller, deserved far greater credit than they received while playing brilliantly in the shadows of their famous backfield, a backfield that caught and held attention at every move through any game they played. These South Bend linemen, while not bulky in any way, were also smart, fast and alert, matching one of the best lines in the Army annuals. But, after all, Notre Dame's main asset was her backfield speed. Stuhldreher, Crowley, Miller and Layden were all exceptionally fast. Crowley and Miller, the two halfbacks, started quickly, cut alert-
