Rupert Nice But 'Smells'

Comment Stings Publicity Body Into Demanding Curative Action—Totem Poles Wasting

Vilely odiferous sewer outlets are not only a danger to the health of the community but are also a bad advertisement for the city among visitors, the Prince Rupert Public Relations Council held Thursday night in deciding to press upon the city authorities and the public health department that something should be done without further delay about the matter. It was at first suggested that it might be possible to divert strolling tourists from the particularly offensive Cow Bay area but the consensus was that it would be more desirable to go to the bottom of the matter and have it cleared up. "There should be no part of the city of which we are ashamed particularly when the health of the community is involved," said one of the council members.

The whole thing came up when the chairman of the council, Miss Honora Silver-sides, repeated the comment of one tourist: "Prince Rupert is a nice place but it stinks."

The still reclining totem poles alongside the Museum also received the attention of the Council which decided to communicate with the Indian Superintendent with a view to getting some action in having them erected. There seemed to be some uncertainty as to who had been responsible for having the renovated poles dumped there months ago and left to deteriorate. Unless something was done about it soon, however, it was feared the poles would be beyond redemption and this seemed to be a pity after the trouble that had been gone to in their restoration.

The Council heard intimation from two American motorists that they were setting out from New York to drive to Prince Rupert for the Manson medal but so far there was no word of the progress of either the New York honeymooners, Mr. and Mrs. Abbott Sydney, or Stanley Filon of Jersey City.

The Government Travel Bureau wrote that it was endeavouring to get the information bureau of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce straightened out following a recent incident when that Bureau had informed motorists that there was no transport available by steamer for automobiles from Prince Rupert to Alaska.

The Travel Bureau also advised the Council that there were now no mandatory re-

Removed Mountain For Site of Mill

First big step in the development of the site of the celanese pulp mill at Port Edward was the $500,000 excavation job which was completed a few weeks ago by the B.C. Bridge & Dredging Co. A virtual mountain of rock was removed to provide a solid site for the mill buildings. It was one of the largest single excavation jobs ever undertaken in this part of the country.

restrictions as to travel over the Alaska Highway although motorists were warned that they should be in a position, financially and otherwise, to be protected against emergencies.

E. G. Rowebottom, deputy minister of trade and industry for the province, lauded the Council for its recently issued pamphlet which he described as one of the very finest which had come to his attention. The appreciation was made tangible in the way of a check of $200 from the Department to assist in defraying the cost. Mr. Rowebottom also made suggestions as to effective circulation.

A letter from the city assured that early consideration would be given to the request for a grant in connection with the pamphlet financing.

Another contribution is due from Canadian Pacific Airlines which is paying for a supply of the pamphlets.

A communication from Canadian Port and Shipping Directory acknowledged receipt of corrective information which would be included in the next edition.

RECORD NUMBER OF CASES IN POLICE COURT

City police believe that they had a record month in magistrate's court in July when 124 informations were laid, resulting in 124 prosecutions and convictions. Not in recent years have there been so many cases in any one month.

Total of fines and court costs collected was $2,096, bringing the amount for the year to date to $11,237. Liquor charges laid under the Indian Act and the Government Liquor Act accounted for 115 of the cases.

Monetary losses from Criminal Code complaints totalled $490, of which $303 was recovered.
