Port Arthur Is In Final

Canadian Amateur Hockey Association Charged With Commercialism

TORONTO (P)—Port Arthur West End Bruins won the Western Canada junior hockey title Wednesday night by handing the Lethbridge Native Sons an 11 to 1 trouncing in the seventh and deciding game of the series to qualify for the Memorial Cup finals against Barrie, Ontario, Flyers.

Move of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association in ruling that the final game of the Western Junior Hockey playoff be played at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens brought numerous charges of "commercialism" from western sports scribes.

Maurice Smith of Winnipeg Free Press was quite perplexed at the thought of a western final game being played in eastern Canada. He commented: "The only conclusion we can draw is that the C.A.H.A. will stop at nothing to make a few extra bucks."

Smith said a report, supposedly from C.A.H.A. officials in Regina, had given as the reason for the move "It was felt unfair to give Port Arthur more than four 'home games.' He branded this "The lamest excuse we have heard in many a moon" and added there were two obvious inconsistencies in the move.

He instanced the Winnipeg Monarchs-Port Arthur Bruins western semi-final series in which the first two games were played at the Lakehead city with the rest of the series, provided there was no split, slated for Winnipeg. Smith declared that "There was no thought then on the part of the C.A.H.A. of the arrangements being unfair to Port Arthur by compelling the Bruins to play five games in Winnipeg. So why the sudden change of heart now?"

Maurice also notes that Hamilton Tigers, eastern senior finalists with Ottawa Senators, will not get a single game on their home ice. He quoted Tiger Coach George Redding as saying: "It's very unfair that Tigers have to play all of their games away from home because the C.A.H.A. feels that the Hamilton rink is not big enough. . . if the C.A.H.A. weren't such a money-grabbing organization Hamilton fans would have a chance to see the team that has carried their colors into three successive Allan Cup semi-finals."

Smith said Hamilton had sought at least one home game in their best-of-three series for the Ontario title with Renfrew Lions, but authorities reportedly said they couldn't make it a best-of-five series and give Hamilton a game because there wasn't time—then the Tigers had to lay off 12 days waiting for the Senators to qualify.

He concluded: "Great boys these C.A.H.A. moguls."

CHAMPS APPEAR ON CAPITOL STAGE

A large intermission audience applauded last night when Coach Alex Bill, Captain Angus MacPhee and members of Prince Rupert provincial championship basketball team were presented on the stage of the Capitol Theatre. Each player was presented with a $20 book of theatre passes by Manager J. H. Black. Arthur Murray, president of the Prince Rupert Basketball Association, urged the development of athletics from the youngest of school children so that Prince Rupert might win championships not only in basketball but in other lines of sport. He expressed appreciation to Mr. Black and the Famous Players-Canadian Co. Later in the evening the team members were guests of the Canadian Legion at the Legion Hall.

Sun Plays Up Local Hoop Team's Win

Reporting the winning of the hoop title at Alberni by the Prince Rupert all-star basketball team, the Vancouver Sun gives the despatch a two column box position in middle of the sporting page and says "the games drew a record attendance for basketball in the Alberni district."

DISAPPOINTED IN WINNINGS

MONTREAL—Fred Hampshire, 63-year-old railway blacksmith, says he has received $12,789.99 instead of an expected $40,000 as winner of a top prize in the sweepstakes held by the Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans' Association at Quebec. Hampshire held a winning ticket on Sheila's Cottage, Cambridgeshire winner. "I'm not protesting about the money," declared Hampshire, "nor am I accusing anyone. But I do think the public should know just how much I received. I tucked the money in the bank, and keep on. If I gave up work I would not live three days."

SHORT SPORT

Two figures in knightly armor brandished broadswords, advanced across a British greensward toward each other and cried through their visors: "Caitiff, I would fain slay thee weassand." And not so, I will cleave thee to the chine," as the clang of 500-year-old steel on steel re-echoed near Minstead, Hampshire. They were Adrian Conan Doyle, son of the late author, and Capt. Douglas Ash, an artist, who for months have been reliving in speech, deed and dress the days of Crecy and launch a "back to medievalism" movement in sport.

Their duel ended—no blood was shed—Doyle, whose father's works included "The White Company," a tale of the Hundred Years' War, and Ash relaxed to tell reporters their views. "Sire, this is no merry joke," said the six-foot Doyle, unheeding himself. "Come quaff a stoup of ale and tarry awhile, for I am battle weary." Pointing to the perspiring captain, he added: "This oaf has cut me all over this day."

Ash bowed with a sweep of his gauntleted arm. The trouble with people today," he elucidated, "is that they are losing all their individualism and chivalry. We want to change that. Instead of SPORTSMEN we have become a nation of sports-watchers."

"He's dead right," chimed in Doyle. "There's no sport in kicking a leather pudding around a field. This is the only true sport." He grabbed for his 10-foot-long sword. Readjusting his visor, Ash went clanging across the lawn after him, roaring: "By my two-handed sword I will spit thy knave's blood."
