Let's End It Quickly

\ ITH the two obstinate sides refusing under final pressure to yield and the government declining to take the responsibility of enforcing an and to the tie-up, Canadian Parliament, which opened today in special session, is faced with an unprecedented problem in dealing with the railway

Maybe either or both sides to the dispute are to blame, maybe the government is to be criticized for not having met the situation more effectively, but those are questions which can be discussed later.

The thing now is to get the railways back in operation again as expeditiously as possible before further damage has been done—and there has been plenty already.

Possibly everybody was believing that it could not happen, that somebody was going to yield or do smething. As it turned out nobody yielded sufficiently and nobody did anything. The strike came and, for better or for worse, was permitted to continue. Certainly, some one or perhaps more than one was to blame.

We have had a bitter experience in an already troubled time when we could ill afford to have such a demoralizing disruption—a disruption which has caused inconvenience and discomfort and, what is quite as bad, has shaken our confidence in the established machinery and the will to prevent such things.

On one thing all must be agreed and that is that the tie-up must end with a minimum of further delay even if drastic action has to be taken. It is a difficult situation and it may require a distasteful remedy which will have to be swallowed by the parties concerned.

In any case, the people themselves, through office in our town were their elected representatives, have the matter in chuckling over this: their own hands, and, no matter what mistakes may have so far been made, it is going to be settled in the democratic way.

And, apart from getting this crisis settled, there will be the problem of taking steps to ensure as effectively as possible that such a thing does not happen again. The nation cannot afford it.

PRINCESS ARRIVES

A motherly woman who has half-dozed through / the news from Korea and Lake Success turns the radio knob a touch higher as the announcer says something about Buckingham Palace.

A waitress, picking up a napkin, says, "I told you it was going to be a girl."

"Aw, that stuff!" says the town grouch. "You women!"

But a young father, wiping a smudge of truck grease off his chin, smiles indulgently.

It is the fairy story in the day's news. "Her Royal Highness . . . was safely delivered of a Princess . . . today" is the way the bulletin from Clarence House tells it.

And everybody is glad to hear that Princess Elizabeth is doing well and that little Prince Charles has a sister.

Because the British Royal Family have shown themselves wholesome and kindly, because we still like stories with castles and princes in them, and because everybody loves a baby-we all wish them well.—Christian Science Monitor.

THE CORE OF the which has Canada in a creeping paralysis as this is written, is the 40-hour week. The employers want the 40 hour week beginning next year. The employers have conceded the 40 hour week to take effect near

It has not only allowed prices to rise, faster than wages. But in many cases it has actually entered into arrangements to boost the cost of living higher than it would have been, under the so-called "law" of supply land demand

There is another factor about the 40 hour week oten forgotten. A human being is capable of doing only so much work in any one week. DOWN TO BUSINESS

Parliament has plenty to think about as the House sits today. The railway strike is purely domestic yet with no lack of points which call for careful thought and study. Korea and the army may be considered international but not without risks that could expand present hostilities.

Shaking the Quilts

No fewer than 450 mayors assembled in Saskatoon for the municipalities convention, shorty before the railway strike brought a shortage of room cleaning and bed-making services. The mayors were therefore invited to make their own beds A good many had their wive along, and these, presumably, provided the suggestions and in-
