Help the Army

In the columns of the Daily News today there appears the simple announcement by the local Chairman of the Salvation Army Red Shield Appeal...

The amount asked for is modest in proportion to the amount of work done. The Salvation Army workers are not highly paid and they practise great economies in every field of activity...

We are prone to forget at times that the dollars which go to Church and to such organizations as the Red Cross and The Salvation Army are as much shrunken in value in the market as are the ones we spend ourselves.

The Daily News heartily commends The Red Shield Appeal. Let us make sure that The Salvation Army can work for us another year and pay the bills it incurs in doing that work.

Incidentally, contributions may be left at the Daily News Office if it is more convenient.

LET'S SETTLE IT

Now that the other strikes are over, Prince Rupert can get along without straight freighter transportation to and from Vancouver for a time without too much hardship and inconvenience.

This complaint of the longshoremen against the Frank Waterhouse line is nothing new. It is well known they have been restless about it for a long time.

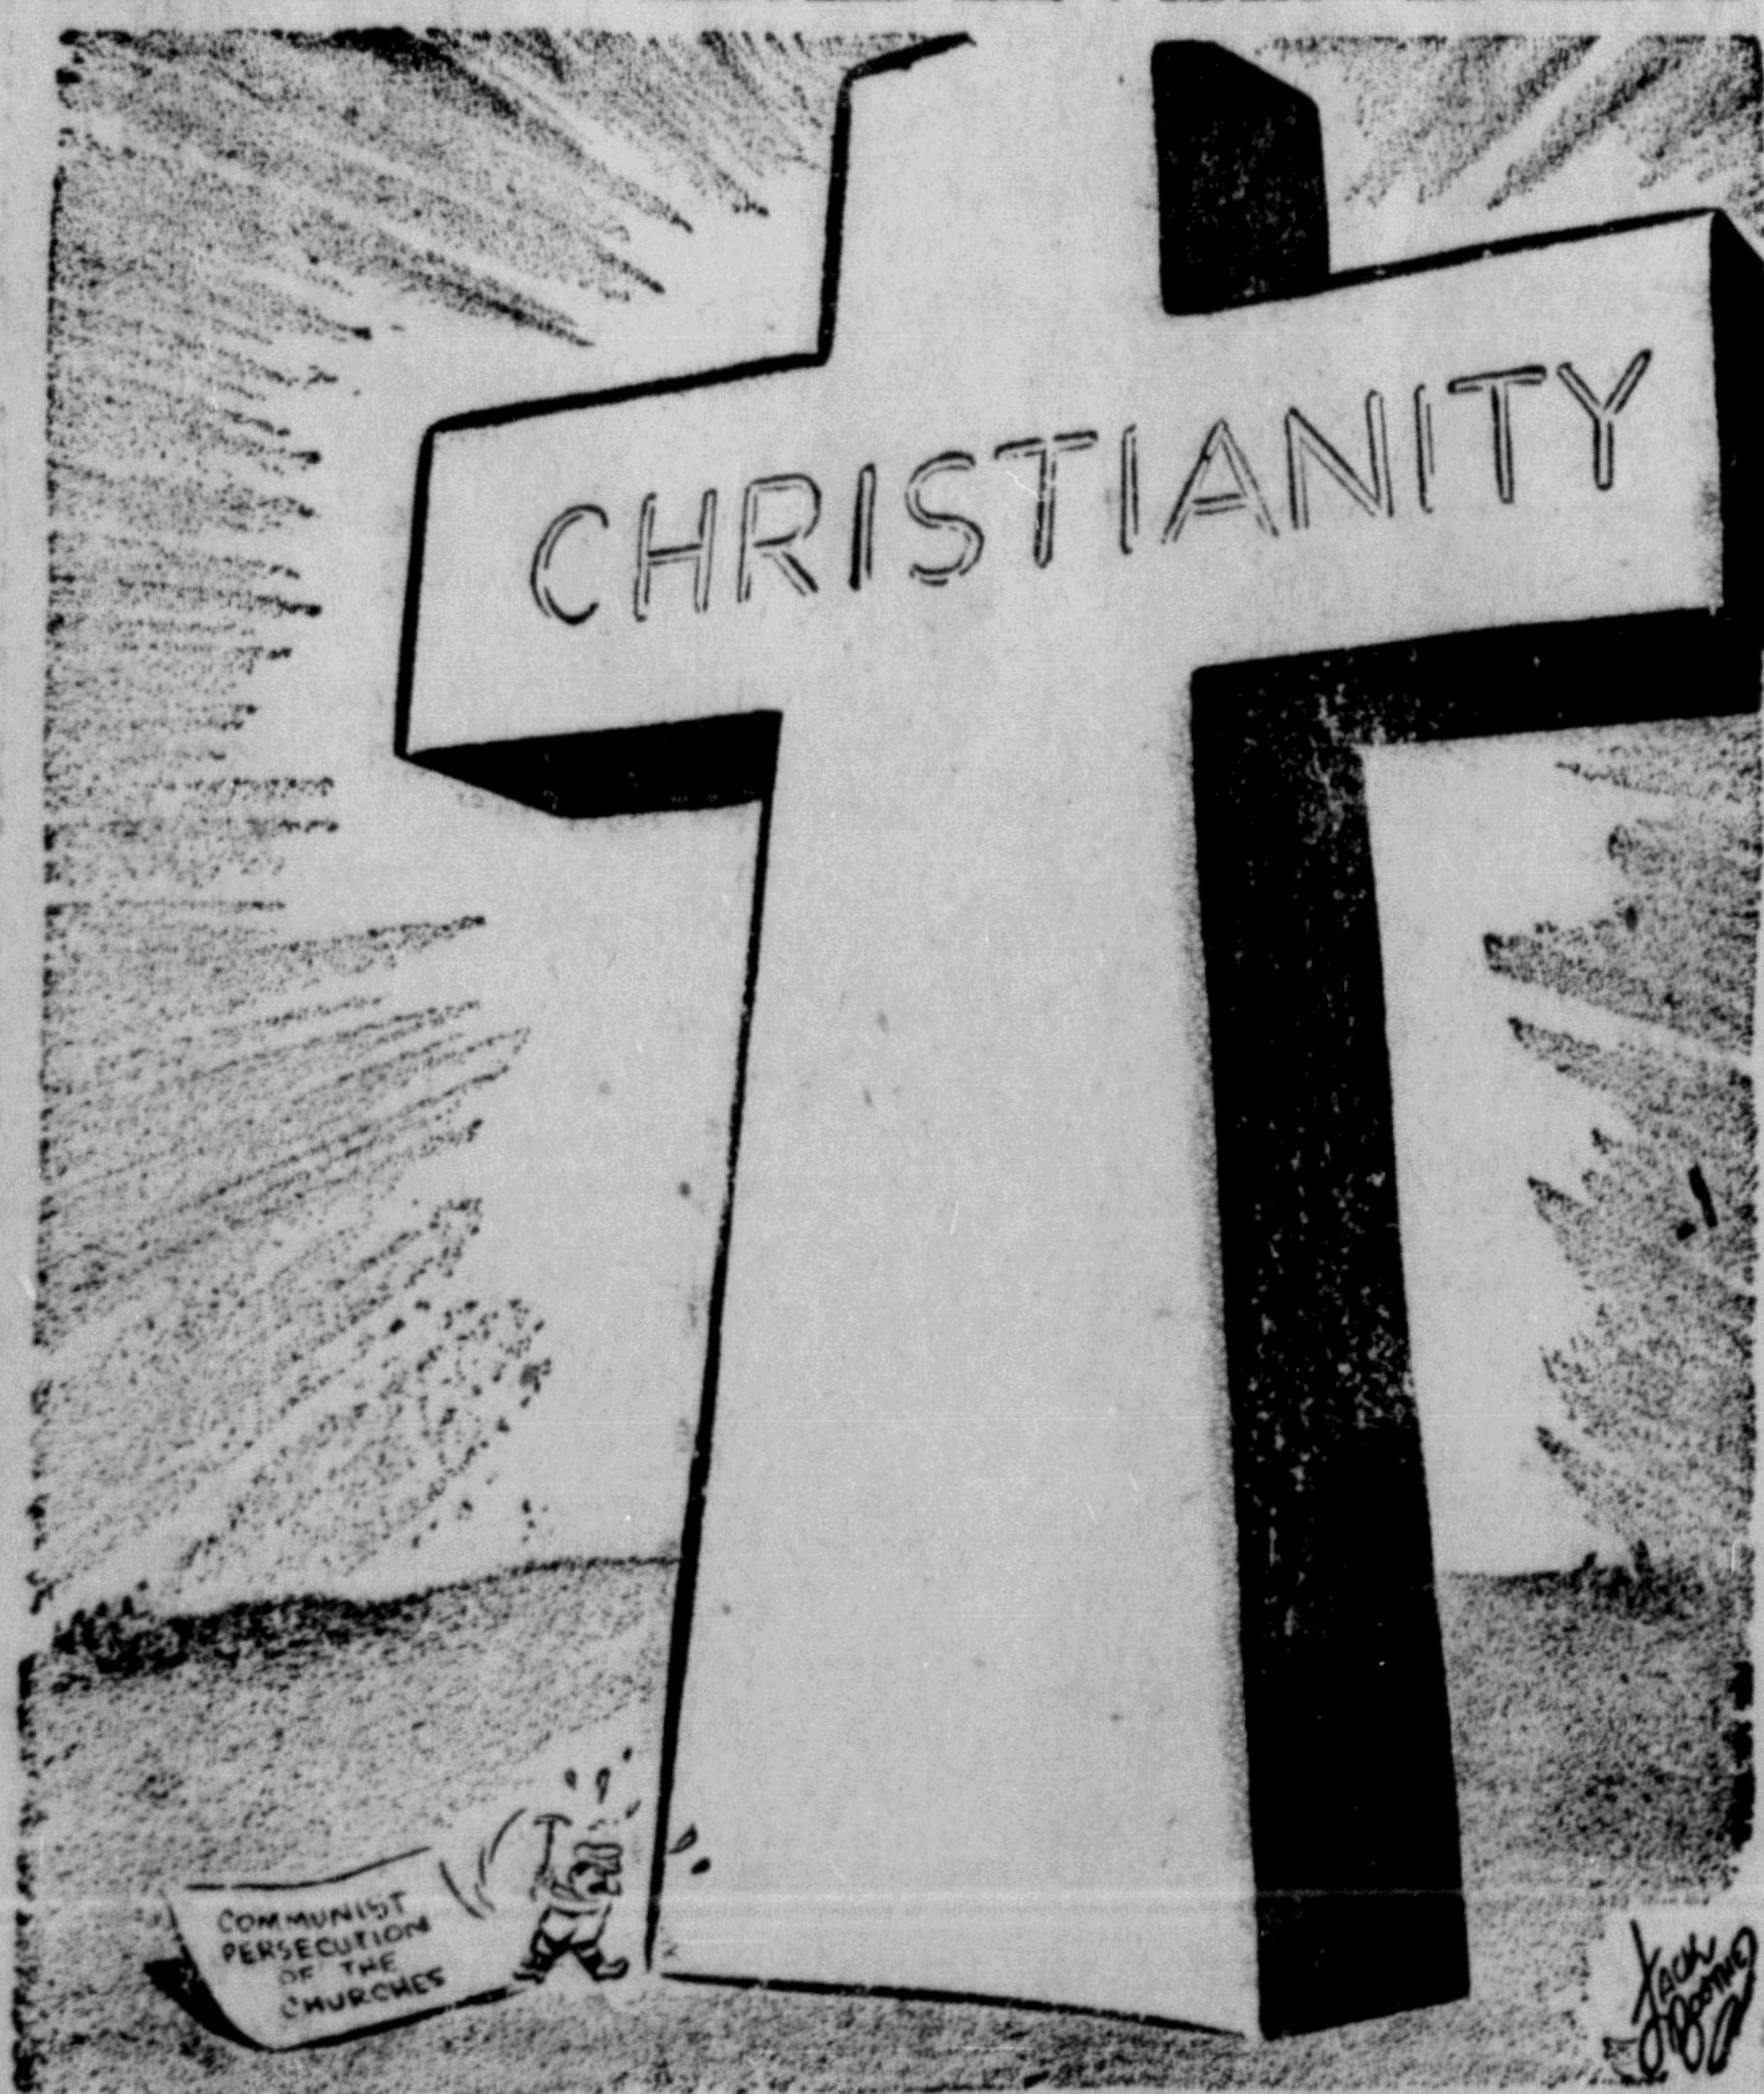

We hope that the action of the longshoremen will not recoil against their own best interests and that some sort of a settlement will soon be reached between the company and the stevedores.

A SUGGESTION as the hunting season opens: Be certain in all things. Better lose the bag, than try to explain. A man packing out a deer may not be what you think it is.

As I See It

NATIONALISM PASSING

HERE AT CAMP Elphinstone, in the 1950 session of the Public Affairs Institute, my own job has been easy. I am supposed to be the co-ordinator of the various talks and discussions.

But so good are the imported speakers, and so lively are the group discussions, that I can more or less coast along.

My particular aim, this year, is to help clarify the difference between what is called patriotism and what is called nationalism.

By and large, I think patriotism is a natural inevitable and, therefore, good thing.

It is natural for a person to love his own country just as it is natural for a person to be affectionate to his own kith and kin. It is also true, I think, that "that man's the best cosmopolite who loves his native country best."

NATIONALISM, as we have come to know it, seems to me a very different thing. It is a sort of perverted patriotism. It is a system which tries to exalt one's own country at the expense of one or more other countries.

It is the warped kind of creed which teaches young people that there is one set of law and standards to be applied within one set of moral and ethical one's own country but that there is an entirely different set of standards and values to be applied to relationships between one's own fellow citizens, and quite another set to be applied to others.

THE ESSENTIAL difference that I see between patriotism and nationalism is that we must always have patriotism if we are to have a healthy, vitally alive world.

But nationalism is a passing phase in human history. It has already outlived its usefulness. The time has passed when humanity can be divided up into 60 or 70 entities called "nations" which have law and order within their own domains, but no law between them except the law of tooth and claw—the law of the jungle.

THE GREAT WORLD struggle that has gone on ever since 1914, in one form or another, seems to me one which will decide which power, or group of powers, is going to write the fundamental laws of the coming age of supra-nationalism—that is, law ABOVE the level of the local law of the nations.

Will it be a Red print, written by World Communism? Will it be a western democratic blueprint? Obviously it might be one or other if the present struggle is continued into world war four.

I DO NOT BELIEVE we shall get a true basis for harmonious world law until all the great sections of the human family are ready, willing, able to sit down together and write the first Charter for what Tennyson called "the parliament of man, the federation of the world." How near or far, in point of time, that day may be I do not care to guess.

Here at this year's camp we have not argued about red-hot current issues. One would never know, from the peaceful atmosphere here, that Canada's first general railway strike was on; nor that there is war in Korea.

There is a marked difference between the SPIRIT here now in 1950 from what there was in 1942, or even in 1945. There was more contention, more argument in the air then, I felt—or rather feel now.

Not that we minimize the gravity of the world situation. We are learning the difference between argument and discussion.

Truman Does Not See World War

WASHINGTON, D.C. — President H. S. Truman exposed the belief yesterday that the Korean war would not extend into a general world war.

The Communist offensive had now reached its peak and the job was to drive it back. Speaking of Russia, the President charged the Soviet with preaching peace and practising armed aggression.

Salvation Army Campaign To Start in City Next Tuesday

Robert E. Montador, chairman of the 1950 Red Shield Appeal, states that Tuesday, September 5 is the starting date for the canvass of Prince Rupert business establishments and homes on behalf of the work of The Salvation Army.

The objective for Prince Rupert area is $3200, of which some $700 has already been subscribed by the citizens of Terrace, Alice Arm, Stewart, and Premier. The balance of the objective is to be raised in Prince Rupert.

G. R. S. Blackaby will be the treasurer of this year's appeal and donations may be sent directly to him at the Bank of Montreal.

A committee of business men will be calling on their associates in the business section. Captain Poulton is arranging a house-to-house canvass by other voluntary workers.

In a city of 10,000 people this objective, Mr. Montador thinks, should not be too much of a financial strain on any pocket. "Some cannot give, others will not, but the majority can and want to do so; and the measuring stick for their giving should be this simple one—the value of The Salvation Army to my fellow Canadians who need the services of this organization," he says.

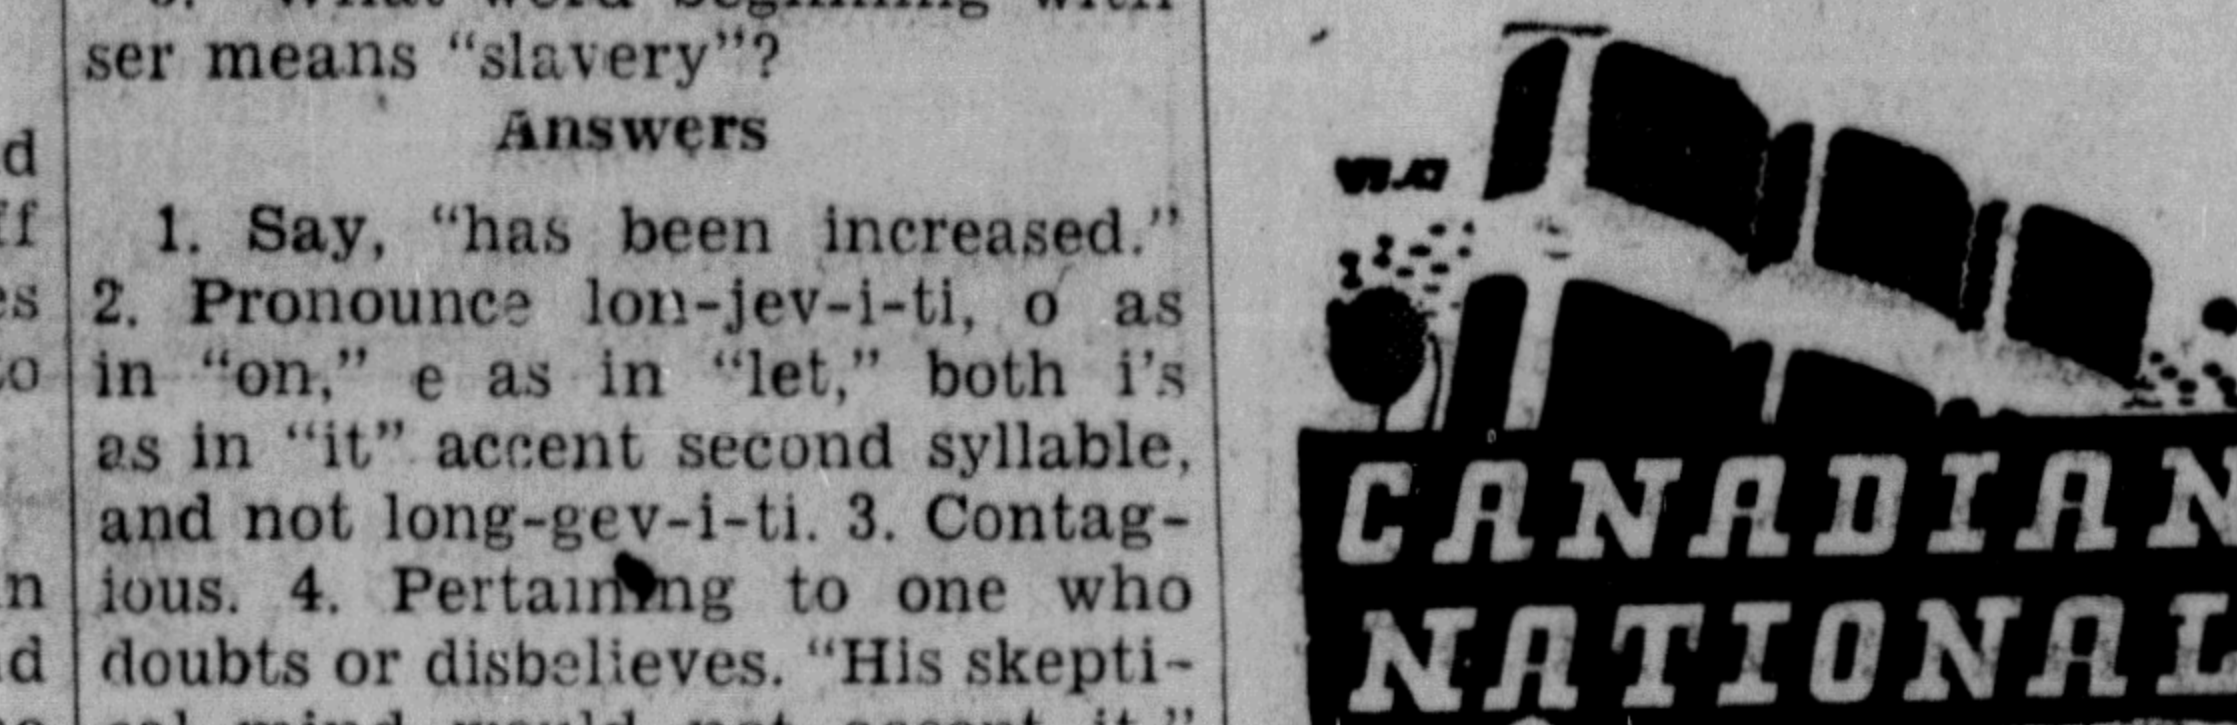

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Hunter and Norman Moorehouse will be leaving at the first of the week for a month's motor holiday trip to Vancouver and elsewhere in the south.
