FIRST STEP TO POWER—This sketch shows the projected dam at Libby, Mont., the first of two to be constructed on the Kootenay River to develop power and flood control over area of approximately 70,000 acres on both sides of the boundary between British Columbia and the United States. The Libby dam, approximately 425 feet high, will store water to a maximum elevation of 2,440 feet. The project, undertaken jointly by the governments of Canada, the United States and British Columbia, will include a second dam on the Kootenay in British Columbia.

Ray Reflects . . .
. . . and Reminisces

Why are prospectors and old-timers always "grizzled?" They could be bald, or clean-shaven. Why are accident cases always "rushed" to the hospital? They could move slowly, and with care.

An Englishman said not long ago that the thing that most impressed him about North America was the admirable way parents obeyed their children.—Hamilton Spectator.

A little pleasant, now and then, appears to be permissible in the House of Commons. Recently, Macintosh Red apples from British Columbia were presented: one apple for each member. A few appropriate remarks were made by G. A. Cruickshank (Fraser Valley). Mr. McCusker, from an eastern riding, thanked Mr. Cruickshank for his information. Otherwise the apples might have been mistaken for cranberries from Newfoundland.

The Yukon River gold bonanza having petered out, another alleged strike is reported from a village in Northern California called Castaic. It was near there the State's original excitement started in 1842 and seven years later, in 1849, the world famed stampede broke. Charley Allen runs a cafe in Castaic and he struck color when deepening a well in the rear of the restaurant. The fever is on. Men are panning for gold with skillets, frying pans, pie plates—anything handy. Central B. C. is round about midway between California and Yukon. The logical location for the next yellow metal flurry!

Bill Sullivan—but to most of us, he's just "Sully"—has lived in Prince Rupert since earliest days and he also has a few reminiscences of his own. How many know that Joachim von Ribbentrop used to work in Skeena? He was one of Hitler's key men and like the rest of the crew did not survive the second great war. He held down a lumber camp job somewhere in this district, and also was employed aboard a river steamer in the steward's department.

"It was there I first met him," said Mr. Sullivan the other day. "He was a Prussian, all right. He must have learned how to be a waiter while he lived in Germany. When he waited on table, he did just that. He'd take the order, place everything—just so—step back and stand silently waiting. He was all waiter. As I recall him, he was just an ordinary looking fellow who didn't talk any more than he had to."

No one remembers when von Ribbentrop left the north, but it is known that when the First Great War began, he was in Ottawa and had been there a considerable time. He had become quite well known as a young man about town.

Between the first and second Great Wars he was employed for some years as a travelling salesman, handling champagne. He was also active in politics, once the Nazi creed began to spread across Germany. With Hitler in power, von Ribbentrop climbed to high authority. Little did anyone imagine, back in 1910 that the youth, packing dishes back and forth on a Skeena river boat was destined to determine life or death for fellow countrymen and live to be hated by nations and finally executed.

Announcement is made that the big Canadian National coastal liner Prince George will be remaining on the Vancouver-Westview-Ocean Falls-Prince Rupert-Ketchikan run until the last week in December after which the steamer Prince Rupert, which has been undergoing an extensive overhaul at Vancouver, will return to the run. The last sailing of the Prince George south from here will be December 29.

C.P.R. steamer Princess Norah, with Capt. Graham Hughes in command, has taken up service for the winter on the Alaska run of the British Columbia Coast Steamship Service. The vessel was here on Monday morning northbound and will be back on Saturday afternoon returning south. Passengers sailing from here for the north on the Princess Norah were Mr and Mrs Leonard Youngman for Ketchikan and Peter Brown for Juneau.
