Roughed Up Beer Parlor, Is Fined

William Louzanan, a Columbia Cellulose employee, could not remember what happened Tuesday night, he was reminded in city police court next morning that he had caused a rumpus in a 3rd Avenue beer parlor, struck a bartender and damaged a door to the extent of eight dollars.

The manager of the premises was present in court and alleged that the accused had swung on the door, breaking the jamb, hit one of the bartenders and used filthy language in the ladies' section, where he was later picked up by two city constables. He resisted arrest, but was finally persuaded to make the trip to the lock-up for a night's rest.

Magistrate Vance advised the accused to drink a little less and stop entirely if his memory failed him. He was fined $15 and $3.75 in costs. He promised to make restitution for the door.

Is Charged With Attempt to Kill

Mike Rosen, employee of Oscar Dunlap, whom he is alleged to have wounded with a shotgun at Crow Lake late Wednesday night, was charged with attempted murder in city police court Thursday afternoon, six hours after he had been locked up in the city jail. Magistrate H. E. Glassey read the charge to Rosen who did not blink an eye. Preliminary hearing will commence March 10 or sooner. Cpl. H. Taylor asked for the remand so that further investigation could be carried out.
