

Vancouver Painter Returns to Dublin

VANCOUVER — Artist Cliff Robinson doesn't mind being poor—so long as it's in Dublin. So, the 33-year-old artist recently packed up his easel, brushes and 400-odd paintings and headed for his native Ireland. He says poverty goes hand-in-hand with an artist's life. But, "It should be easier to be poor in Dublin."

Robinson was employed as a travelling instructor with the extension department of the University of British Columbia. He quit because the job didn't "pay enough to hold a competent person for any great length of time."

He'll be doing much the same in Dublin. But he expects to gain new ideas from "the new Irish renaissance."

COVENTRY, England — A prize of $6,000 has been offered for the architect submitting the best designs for rebuilding Coventry Cathedral. The 14th century edifice was destroyed with many other buildings in the blitz of 1940.

Warlike Measure Recoils Smartly

LONDON — Lord Woolton, chairman of the Conservative party and former food minister, believes it is high time the Labor government scrapped many of the legislative controls introduced as wartime emergency measures.

Discussing the question in the House of Lords, the erstwhile minister provoked a roar of laughter when he told of having been the victim recently of an outmoded regulation introduced by himself in 1941. It involved confiscation by the customs authorities of five pounds of sugar sent by a generous friend from overseas.

In sugar-rationed Britain the restriction had been imposed during the war because of the serious shipping situation at the time. It forbade acceptance of more than five pounds of any food in gift parcels.

Such regulations, Lord Woolton argued, now are unnecessary.

When a customs official was told of the incident he said Lord Woolton could have his sugar back, provided he gave satisfactory assurance it was sent to him as an unsolicited gift.

Last summer, after a West Indies firm advertised its product in the British Isles, customs officers launched a drive against shipments of sugar parcels. The authorities claimed the parcels were paid for and as such were not unsolicited gifts.
