DEVELOPMENTS IN U.S.

E.C.A. has had some trouble at home:

1. Congress said half the E.C.A. goods must go to Europe in U.S. ships. But American shipping costs are higher than European. As a result, Europeans are spending dollars for shipping that they might use for machinery. So far Hoffman has lost his battle to permit Europe to use its own ships en-

American industries with surpluses have tried to get E.C.A. to bail them out, regardless of whether their goods were necessary to rebuilding Europe.

3. Europeans who get U.S. help must put aside enough of their own currencies to match the help they get. Five percent of those funds is supposed to buy "strategic materials" for the U.S. That program lags.

4. About a fifth of America's $5,055,000,000 first year's aid was supposed to be in loans to Europe Europeans took the gifts quickly but lagged on writing loans. Experts here thought there were few worthy loan risks over there. Chances are they will advise dropping the loan provisions.

5. Very few private American investors have enough confidence in Europe yet to send any money over there.

6. One object of American
