DRAB DESIGN FEATURE OF BERLIN FASHION

Former War Prisoner Says Styles Inspired By Art Of Old Masters

By MURIEL Narraway
Canadian Press Staff Writer LONDON (C)—Germany is back in the dress business.

One of the country's top dress designers is Heinz Oestergaard, a former prisoner of war in Russia. He returned to Germany in 1945 and held his first fashion show by candlelight in a small back room.

Today he has an elegant salon in the west end of Berlin and a large export business, mainly to the United States and Switzerland.

The Clothes?
"Well," says a British reporter, "Berlin is the drabdest city in Europe and these are the drabbest clothes I have ever seen."

Supposed to typify the present reactions of the German housewife, they are loose, ill-fitting and heavy.

Jackets are wide, unfitted, with big pockets and heavy revers. Skirts are wide with shape-less draping, or plain and straight with a heavy, bulky look, instead of today's pencil slimness.

Woolen Stockings
Accoutrements are heavy woollen stockings with colored ankle clock, woolen gloves and woollen hood-cum-scarf. Shoes are heavy, walking wedges with lacslimness.
