Fisherman Is Presumed Dead

Mr. Justice J. V. Clyne, in Supreme Court in Vancouver, has ordered that Jack Rose, Skeena River fisherman, is presumed to have drowned last June. The order was obtained by S. R. Forrest for Mrs. Thelma Rose of North Vancouver. Her petition stated that her husband disappeared two months after he left for northern fishing grounds where he was employed by the Inverness Cannery on the Skeena. It is assumed he perished June 25 near Union Bay north of Vancouver. His gillnetter was recovered on York Island.

Blackwood On Bridge

By Easley Blackwood

It is sad but true that gross overbidding is not always punished. In recent columns I have told you about several hands where Miss Lucy Brash, one of the world's better-known over-bidders, reached fantastic contracts and made them-through a combination of disgustingly good luck and opponents'-

On the receiving end of this with the jack and put Mr. Muzzy brutal treatment were Mr. Dale, in with the queen of diamonds the expert on Humanics, and to run the rest of his spades. Mr. Muzzy, the expert on how plus the diamond ace. Down five not to play bridge. Mr. Dale was -1400 points! confident all along that Miss "A slightly aggressive con-Brash was riding for a fall and tract," murmured Mr. Dale slyin today's hand he got his re-

Miss Brash's doubling of the opening one spade bid was not good. Her partner's most likely response was hearts, which she was not prepared to play. After her two no trump got doubled, Mr. Champion tried to sign off at three hearts (he would have liked to say, "I bid the third and final heart," but that would have been hardly ethical). When three hearts was doubled, Miss Brash blithely put the hand in three no trump, hoping with typical optimism to find her partner with something like the jack of clubs three long and the king, queen of hearts. If East had held those cards the hand would have been not so far from three no trump at

But Miss Brash's luck had run out-and it was about time! East's cards were absolutely worthless to her.

Mr. Dale opened his nine of spades, which was allowed to win. A spade was continued. Miss Brash won and started the clubs, Mr. Dale won the ace and put his partner in with the jack of diamonds for another spade lead, removing Miss Brash's last

Declarer then laid down the queen of clubs hoping in vain for the jack to drop. When it didn't, she followed with the ten of clubs. Mr. Dale won this trick
