Blackwood On Bridge

By Esley Blackwood

In recent columns we have discussed the mathematics of slam bidding. It is always important to keep in mind what you have to gain by bidding and making a slam—in relation to what you have to lose if you go set.

But all of this should be tempered by Humanics

—the inexact science of altering your bidding and play to fit the abilities and personalities of the other players in the game.

South dealer.

None vulnerable.

In today's hand Mr. Dale, the wise old duffer who loses the arguments and wins the money at bridge games, had Mr. Muzzy for a partner.

Mr. Muzzy is a nice enough chap but if there is a way, however remote, to misbid or misplay a hand, he will find it. He has a positive genius in that direction.

The minute Mr. Muzzy opened the bidding with one spade Mr. Dale suspected there might be a slam. But, playing against the two best players in the club, he felt he would be very glad indeed to get any profit at all on this particular rubber—and he didn't intend to take any chance of prolonging it.

Note Mr. Muzzys jump re-bid of three spades, which is a gross over-bid. A six card suit always makes him extremely bullish. But even this did not urge Mr. Dale beyond the four level.

In the play Mr. Masters opened the jack of clubs and Mr. Muzzy won with the ace. He trumped his six of clubs in dummy, took three rounds of spades and led the ace and king of hearts, ditching a diamond on the second heart. Then he cashed the ace of diamonds and conceded two diamonds to the opponents. "With an overtrick, partner," he said proudly.

"Well done, Muzzy, well-done, indeed," replied Mr. Dale, laying a groundwork of good feeling for the future.

He did not point out that six-odd was easy on the hand. Mr. Dale probably would have led a heart at the second trick and won with dummy's ace. Then he would have led a small heart back and trumped it high. Now he would trump the six of clubs with dummy's four of spades then lead the king of spades and the ten of spades, playing low from the closed hand.

Next another small heart from the board, trumped in the closed hand, followed by a high spade, picking up Mr. Champion's last trump. At this point the king and seven of hearts in dummy are good for two diamond discards and the ace of diamonds is there for an entry.

Sometime between Saturday evening and yesterday noon a burglar broke into John Bulger's jewelry store on Third Avenue. Surprising is the fact that although the thief had the entire range of the premises, all that is missing is not more than five gold brooches, a diamond necklace, a few stick pins and about $10 in cash.

G. W. Nickerson, Progressive candidate in the forthcoming election, issued a challenge to the Liberal and Conservative candidates to enter a joint meeting with all candidates speaking the same length of time and sharing expenses.

Indian Agent James Gillett and James Coleman, inspector of Indian Agencies, returned to the city last night from an inspection trip that took them to Mella-katla, Port Simpson, Kincolith, Greenville, Canyon, City and Alyansh.

Prince Rupert men are among those operating the big guns which are firing across the Straits of Dover on Calais, Cap Gris Nez and other French coast invasion bases, it is indicated by word that has been received in the city from England.

Boys of the local Navy League's Sea Cadets attracted favorable attention last evening as they paraded from naval headquarters to the Capitol Theatre to enjoy a showing of the picture "Buck Benny Rides Again."
