"Junior Citizen's Day" was a success with the students filling the officers were absent from their posts but the others found their jobs to be interesting and

The aldermen and mayor began their day at 10 a.m. with meeting at the city hall. This interesting and lively meeting lasted for 11/2 hours, the time mainly being taken up with is said to be a cafe that denies discussion. While all this was taking place, the Junior firemen were having a busy time. The day for most of them had started at 8.30 and ended at 6.00. They spent the day doing fire drill, observing and practising the workings of the fire hall.

Back at the city hall the Police Chief, his assistant and constables were also making a busy day of it. They observed several trials, the defendants of which had been, to use Constable Eidsvik's words, convicted under sections 135 and 137 of the law. In the afternoon, in league with the righteous Alf Worthington, they arrested, jailed and brought to trial the prominent citizen Mr. H. Hampton. What transpired under the watchful eye of Magistrate Ratchford is now history. Later they witnessed another trial after which they concluded their

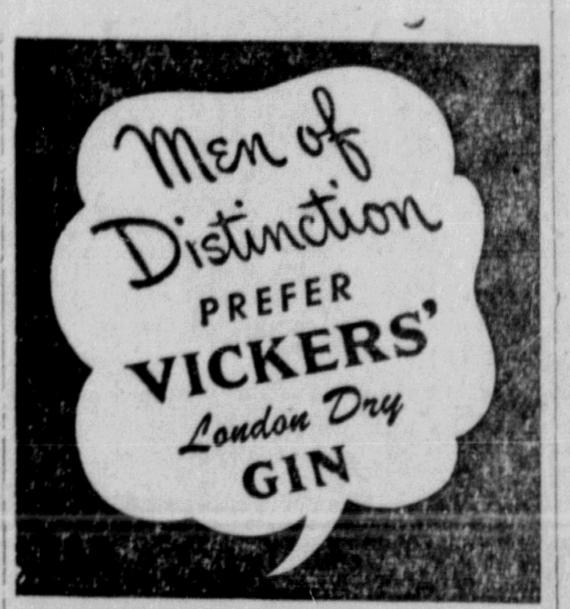

Away from the employees of the city, the people at the Civic Centre were throwing themselves into the spirit of the day with a good deal of zeal. In their capacities as manager and secretary, they practically ran the Civic Centre for a day, doing the many small things which go to make up big job of running the Civic Centre in B.C. Both of them learned much from their experience and are enthusiastic about another "Junior Ctitzen's Day."

Another interesting position, well filled, was that of city treasurer held by Benita Windle. Her day began at 10 a.m. with a practical lesson in money counting. The morning was spent in general office work and in the afternoon she accompanied the city council on its tour of the city. After the tour she returned to the office where she continued with the work on hand until 5.00 p.m. when her day ended.

Meanwhile down at the Power Corporation's office Dennis Mark was spending the day learning all about the Power Co. purchasing agent's job. He spent nearly all his working day helping to file papers and listening to John Thompson explaining his work.

The manager of the Capitol Theatre also had a busy day seeing how a movie theatre is run. Not only did she observe the bookkeeping side of the work but also the practical and mechanical aspects. The day for her continued into the evening in order that she might have a chance to view every part of a movie theatre's operation.
