KENYA COLONY LECTURE TOPIC

A good sized audience assembled in the Salvation Army citadel last evening to enjoy a moving picture address by Brigadier Annie Fairhurst, who for twelve years served as a missionary in Kenya, East Africa.

Major Yurgensen presided and handled the camera, assisted by Mrs. Yurgensen, while an interesting description of the various scenes was thrown on the screen. There were numerous fine views of Mombassa, on the shores of the Indian Ocean, and chief city and seaport of the country. Native life, deep sea shipping, street scenes, parades, incidents and anecdotes of the eastern coast of the dark continent all contributed to providing what was a highly entertaining and informative evening. Incidentally, Major and Mrs. Yurgensen were stationed there years

The colony of Kenya consists of 224,000 square miles, with that part of it known as a British protectorate rented from the Zultan Zanzibar. There is a native population of about three million consisting chiefly of Arabs and Swahilas, as well as Bantu. There are nine provinces and a legislature, as well as 1,900 schools directed by missionary societies. The railway mileage does not exceed

Credit Managers Denounce Gossip

VANCOUVER (P) - Women can make good in the commercial credit field if they suppress_or don't possess-certain female characteristics.

So say a number of United States and Canadian credit managers who attended the recent Northwest Credit Conference here.

Mrs. Margaret Frisbie, credit manager for a Portland, Ore. electrical firm, had this explan-

"Any gossip or loose talk generally will put the lid on the life of a credit clerk. No one wants to broadcast their affairs far and wide."
