NORTH PIONEER PASSES AWAY

Thomas Clwydd Williams, who sought gold in the Yukon, central-northern British Columbia and Venezuela and later was joint proprietor of a Prince Rupert hotel, died in Prince Rupert General Hospital Tuesday at the age of 72.

A resident of Stewart for the last six years, Mr. Williams had been a partner with the late Frank Stevens and Carl Johnson in the Knox Hotel which they bought from Olier Besner in the '20's. He retired from business in 1930 when he suffered a stroke which kept him in ill health until his death.

Mr. Williams was born in Wales and came to Canada 50 years ago. He was one of that diminishing band who went to the Yukon before the turn of the century, lured by gold. He remained to operate a river steamer on the Yukon River for several years after the gold rush.

He came to central British Columbia with the early development of this city and started a logging operation on the Queen Charlotte Islands which lasted during the First World War.

With the post-war slump in lumber prices, he returned to prospecting and went to Venezuela with an American mining company. On his return, he prospected in this district until he entered partnership in the Knox Hotel.

He came from Stewart to enter hospital here three weeks ago.

Mr. Williams is survived by his wife who is now in Stewart.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon from B.C. Undertakers' Grenville Court Chapel, Rev. Fred Antrobus officiating.

WESTERN CHUCKWAGON — When Calgary fans came west to back their victorious Stampeders in the east-west football final at Toronto Saturday, they brought with them everything to give the event a real western touch. Cowboys, Indians and a real western chuck wagon accompanied the fans on their trip east. Here is the chuck wagon as it appeared in the parade from the hotel headquarters of the western supporters to the stadium where the game was played. (CP Photo)
