Parking Meter Revenue Good

HALIFAX @—Parking meters have netted the Halifax city treasury about $24,000 since being installed almost a year ago.
City hall figures they bring in about $3,000 a month.

There are 540 parking meters installed along city streets, mostly in down-town districts.
The average daily take of each meter is estimated at 21 cents.
The meters are in operation 10 hours daily, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., during six days each week, excepting holidays.

They have it figured how busy the meters are. Each meter, says the city hall statistician, can take in a maximum of 50 cents daily. The first lot of 240 meters were installed along city streets last August.

Rupert and from there go to Ketchikan. Sounds delightfully simple, although they say it is to be a water journey, cover 5,000 miles and occupy two years.
It's a bold adventure and they deserve to win. Further if they have figured things close enough, it should be entirely possible. They will be free of any strikes.

This is the first time in Canada's history that a railway strike has taken place. It is also the first time, of which there is any record, that Parliament and Senate will assemble in Ottawa, having travelled there for emergency session, by air. What would Sir John and Sir Wilfrid have said to that sort of deal?

Once, they managed to get around on the B.C. coast, even with next to nothing in the way of transportation. Monday night, the radio told the tale of how a mining man journeyed from the Queen Charlotte Islands to Victoria. This was in the spring of 1863. The north was then a wilderness, and not without dangers. He travelled in the war canoe of a Haida chief. Indians were more inclined to be warlike, than peaceful. The canoe was paddled between six and seven hundred miles. Exposure to weather and other discomforts were taken as a matter of course.

Crossing Queen Charlotte Sound was without incident but, after gaining sheltered waterways between the mainland and Vancouver Island, it was noticed they were moving faster.
This was due the power as well as peril of the currents of Seymour Narrows, a menace to this day to stout shipping as well as to primitive canoe.

Finally, after being out nearly three weeks, they paddled into the haven of Nanaimo and not long after were greeted at Fort Victoria. Practically all the population welcomed the tired voyagers on the shore. This was the end of the longest canoe journey in the story of the coast, eighty-seven years ago.

Totem Society Popularizes B.C.

VANCOUVER, @—Add another organization to the list of agencies boosting British Columbia—the Totem Land Society.

The organization, incorporated as a non-profit society, aims to popularize the province abroad as well as better the economic status of British Columbia's Indians.

Founder of the society and high man on the totem pole.

Harry Duker says: "We want people to think of British Columbia when they think of the totem pole and vice versa."

At its first meeting the society planned to ask merchants—particularly those who export—to place small totem poles on their letterheads and possibly on their products.

The society also considered asking authorities to place 50-foot totem poles at each point of entry into British Columbia.
