King's Plate Is Still Obscure

TORONTO, (C) — Winnipeg-owned Lord Fairmont and Toronto-owned All British won their respective divisions in the King's Plate trial on a muddy track Monday, leaving the question of who will win the classic plate next Monday as obscure as ever. Vancouver-owned Red Bottle finished third to Lord Fairmont after being last out of the gate and badly outpaced earlier.

SHORT SPORT

When middleweights George Roß and Len Wadsworth traded punches in what was billed as a title fight in Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, nearly three weeks ago, neither realized they had started eastern sports writers swinging over the Canadian Boxing Federation.

First to throw one was Alex Nickerson of the Halifax Herald who wrote that Wadsworth thought he was defending his title in the 12-round bout at Glace Bay. When the fight was over, Nivk recounted, Wadsworth thought he had lost the title but then the Canadian Boxing Federation declared the fight didn't count because the Cape Breton Association was not affiliated with the C.B.F.

Then Dink Carroll of the Montreal Gazette took it up with the query: "Who is the C.B.F.?" and promptly answered: "So far as we know the C.B.F. is only one man, Frank Hogan, who is nominally the chairman, though we have heard other names mentioned vaguely in connection with it at one time or another. Frank Hogan twice served as head of the Montreal Athletic Commission and he was a fair-minded and conscientious official. But he has been placed in the ridiculous position of being head of a practically nebulous body which has no office, no stationery, and which does not hold regular meetings."

In rebuttal Andy O'Brien of the Montreal Standard retorted with the remark: "A lengthy but lame attempt to belittle the Federation without apparently attempting to get the facts." "Frankly," said Andy, "I regard the attack as undeserving—the only really constructive steps toward putting Canadian boxing on a sound basis have been made under Hogan's leadership and through the Federation which includes Wilfred San-

Joe Pyle Winner Over Phil Palmer

VANCOUVER, (C) —Joe Pyle, 145 pounds, Montreal, gained a 10-round decision over Phil Palmer, 146 1/2 pounds, Vancouver, in the main event of a boxing show here last night. Pyle, with a steady stream of right hooks, was master from the sixth round.
