

While Parliament is in session, few government publications are more frequently quoted and offer more human interest than Hansard. Better known under its familiar name, "Hansard," is the official report of the House of Commons debates. Experienced Hansard reporters are constantly in attendance in the House, sitting opposite the Clerk's table where the Mace is displayed as a symbol of authority. Reporter Charles Leslie Empringham (upper left) takes in shorthand an almost verbatim report of what the members are saying. Relieved by an other Hansard reporter at the end of a 10-minute stint, he returns to his office to dictate his notes to a fast typist, Miss Muriel Black (upper right). A similar system is followed in the Senate. After the copy has been prepared for publication by the Debates Editor, it goes to the King's Printer to be handled by the night staff. There, Hansard is cast into type, as shown by linotype operator Roger De Gagne (lower left) proofread, bound and distributed the next morning by about 10 o'clock. Within the next hour, the daily edition of Hansard reaches the desks of Members of Parliament government officials, press correspondents and all those entitled to a copy. A complete French edition is also published daily. As soon as Hansard is available, many a writer (lower right) takes the first opportunity to scan through a full account of the House proceedings on which to document a feature article. Canadians have a right to know what goes on in Parliament and Hansard gives them that information, impartially and accurately.

DOMINION DAY AT TERRACE

No Excursion From Prince Rupert—Hazelton Wins Ball Game

TERRACE—Dominion Day in Terrace was one of the quietest known here for years. There was no excursion train from Prince Rupert this year and consequently, there were very few visitors from the coast.

Fine weather prevailed although clouds threatened rain early in the morning. In the afternoon the sun came out but it was not too hot for the spectators at the ball game at the Civic Centre where the Terrace team was thoroughly beaten by the Hazelton team.

The day's events, sponsored by the Kinsmen, started in the morning when the children's parade from the Orange Hall to the Civic Centre got under way with the Cub pack leading. Children in fancy costume and decorated bicycles and wagons followed. Claudia King, as a colored gentleman, and Jimmy Laird, as a colored lady, caused a lot of amusement with their goat who balked at being at the head of the parade but who followed behind quite contentedly.

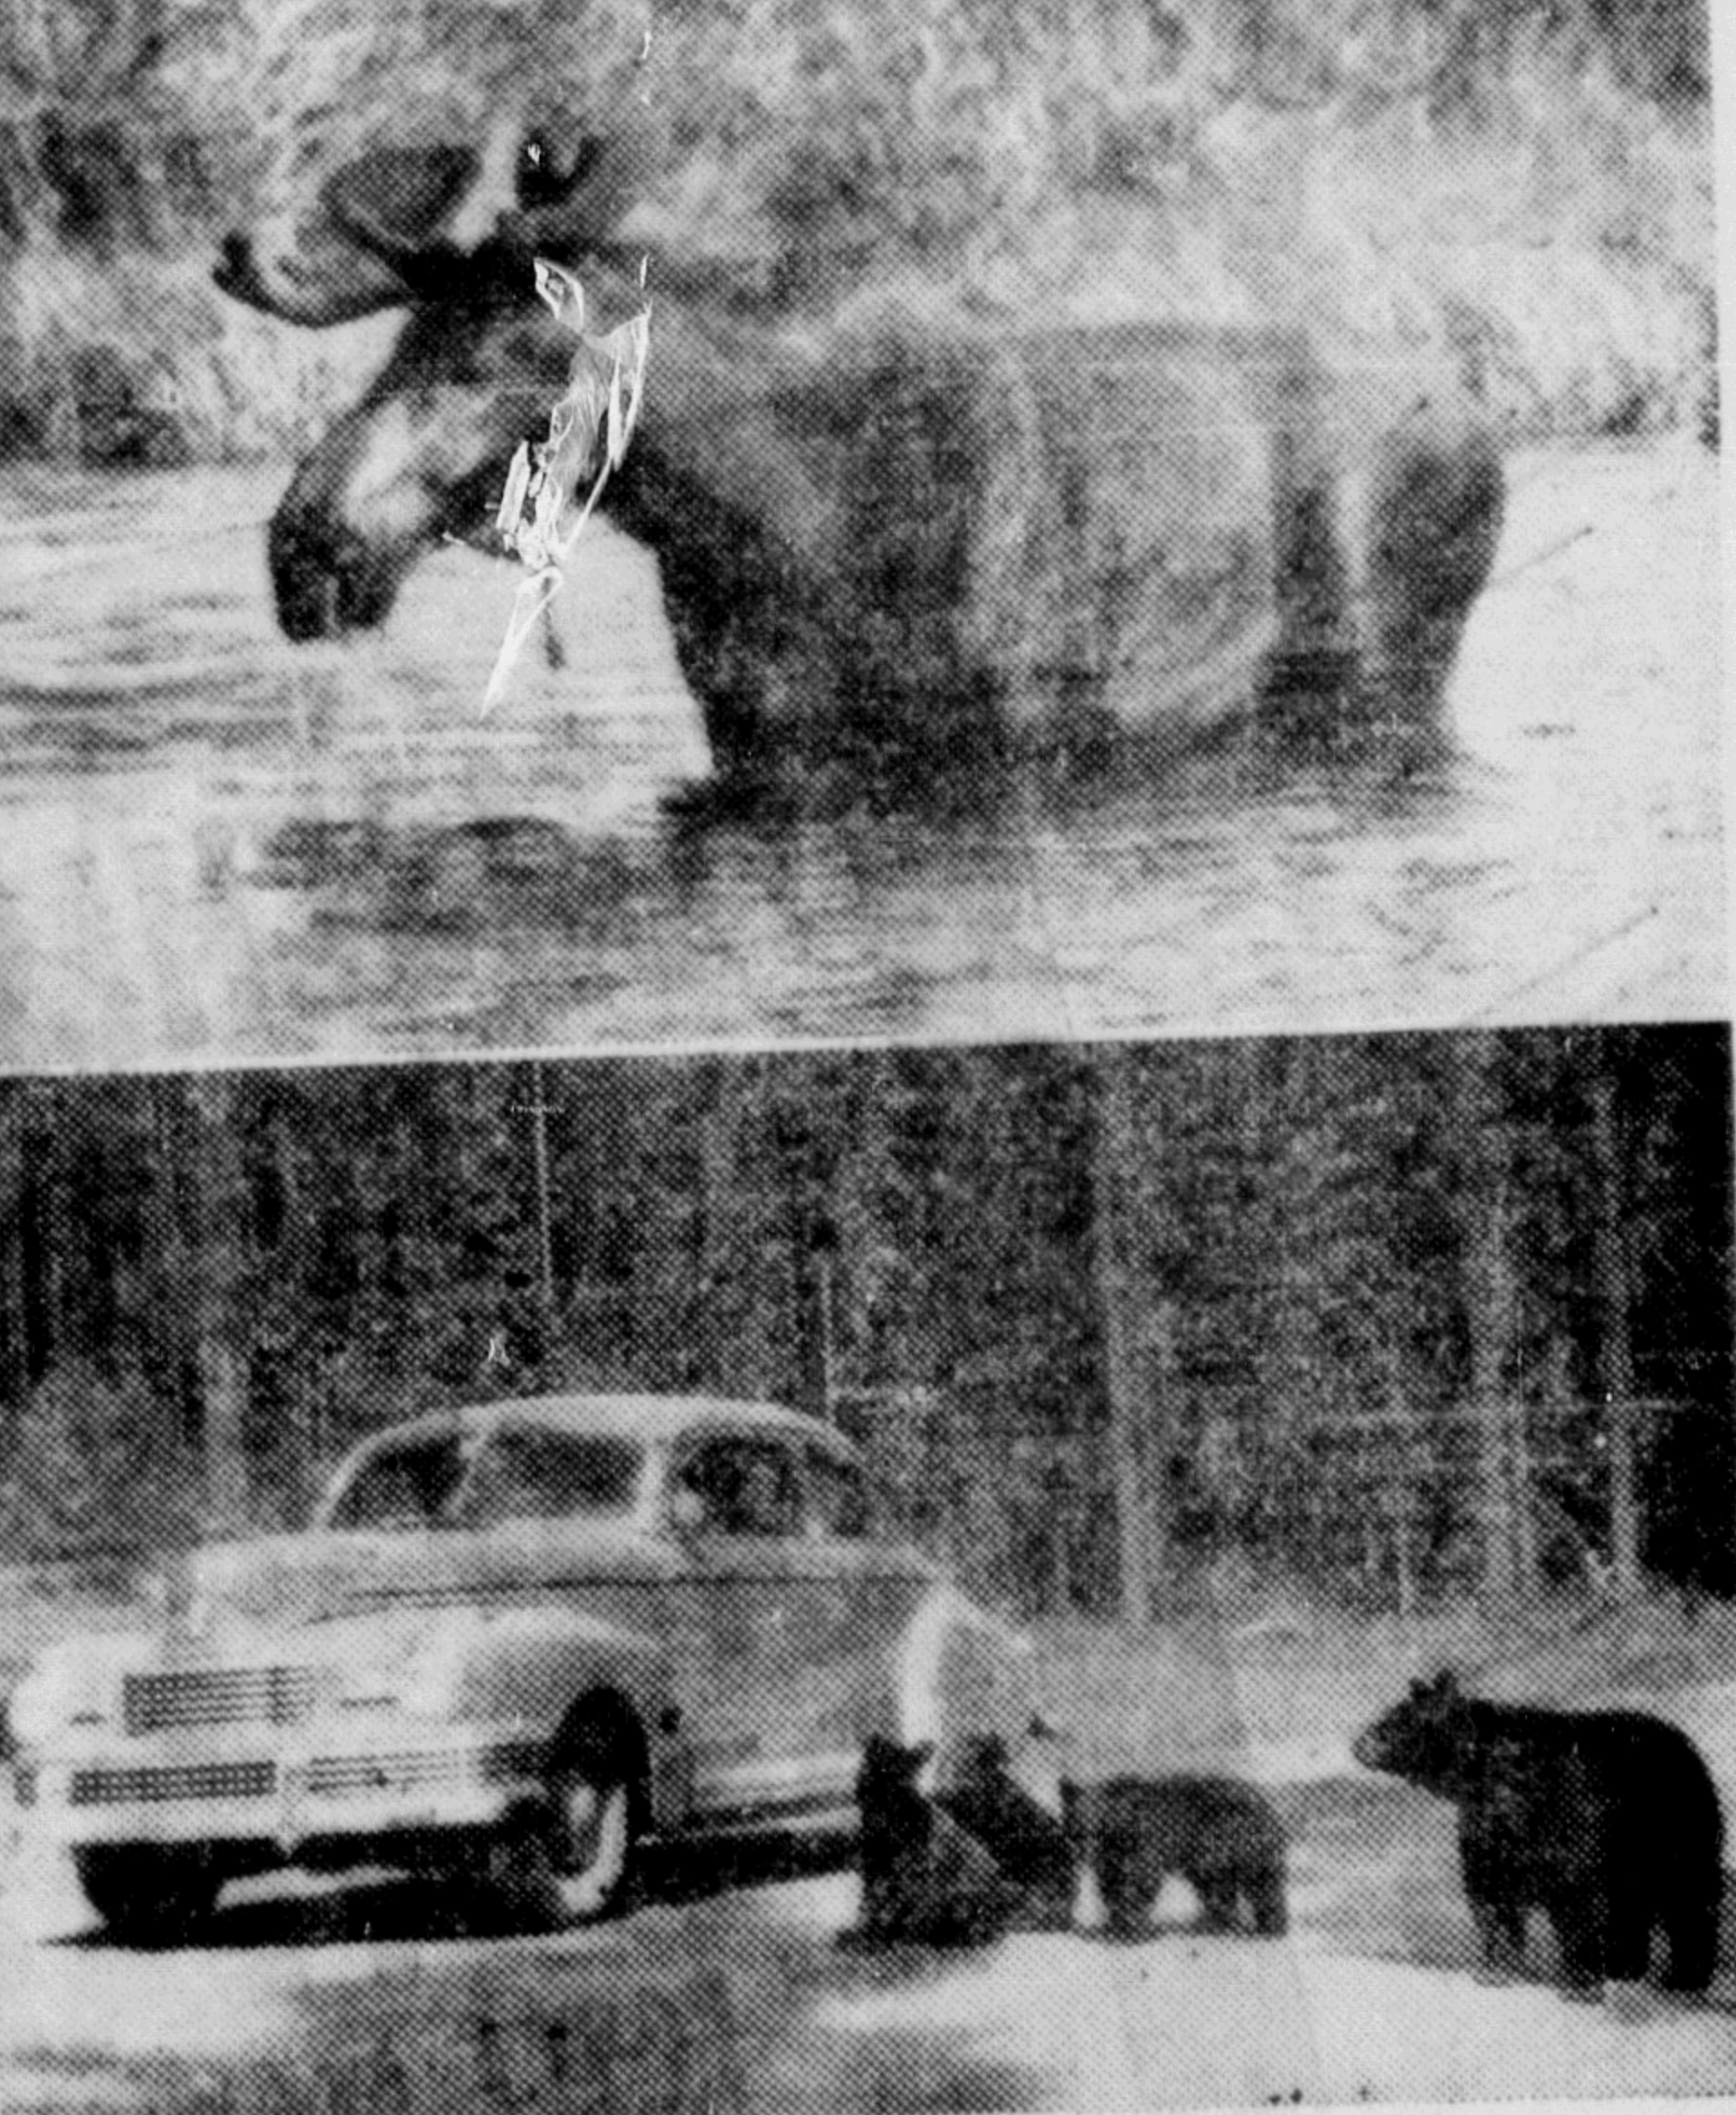

At the Civic Centre Mrs. Thomson and Mrs. McLaren judged the prize winners and these were Ann Smith, Betty Lee van Stolk, Lucille Bailey, Claudia King, Jimmy Laird, Clarence Baker, Gabrielle Tetreault, Marilyn and Tommy de Kergommeaux.

Following the parade the children's races were run off. The bingo and crown and anchor games in the hall drew a large patronage.

In the evening a large crowd gathered in the hall to dance to the strains of Terrace's new orchestra which, after months of hard practice, made its debut on Dominion Day, gave a very fine performance.

An interesting announcement was made by A. Yoxall during the evening was that of the betrothal of Albert J. Harrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Harrison of Terrace, to Josephine Jordan, only daughter of Mrs. G. Jordan and graddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Sundal, who were among the early settlers in Terrace. Adv. In Los Angeles News-paper: 'Ap't wanted large enough to keep wife from going home to mother, small enough to keep mother from coming here.' What starts out as a little white lie frequently turns into a double feature in technicolor. —Jay Walker on WGN

WILDLIFE SANCTUARY—At hardly more than a stone's throw from the Banff Springs Hotel, a visitor may encounter practically all forms of animal life known to the Canadian Rockies. Their almost complete lack of fear is shown by the young mule deer at left, its antlers still in "the velvet" who doesn't intend to have its siesta disturbed by any cameraman. Above at right a big bull moose refreshes himself in the cool waters of Vermillion Lake near Banff, while below a black bear family "hold up" a motorist on the Banff-Lake Louise highway, demanding their toll of chocolate bars or sweet biscuits.
