Portland Canal Ice Thicker as Cold Weather Persists-Heavy Snow at Premier

STEWART—This place is still in the grip of sub-zero weather Although good progress is be ing made by the public Works crew in breaking a channel for the steamer to get to the Stew art wharf, each night sees another inch or so of ice on the freshly opened channel but the battle goes on However, people are still optimistic that the grip of winter that has held the district for the past month will soon be broken. A week ago by almost superhuman efforts the gas boat owned by Ernest Lewis. wharfinger at Stewart, was broken out of the ice and passengers, freight and mail were landed at Hyder, Alaska, wharf. A good windstorm would be a Godsend in clearing the Canal.

Snow plows of the Depart ment of Public Works are battling to open the road to the Silbak Premier mine where the caretaking crew are isolated owing to the heavy snowfalls this winter. The mine crew have fering any hardship. It is rumored around Stewart that some of the buildings hav collapsed under the great weight of snow which is reported as being over 38 feet. That is the
