While no such universally known dish as haggis and tortillas have yet been developed land "down under," nevertheless the Australian housewife has several favorite foods she concocts for her family at meal-time.

An official at the Australian High Commissioner's office thumbed through a homeland recipe book and came up with a couple of items which are bound to find favor with the Canadian housewife.

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C.

British Columbia, Mrs. Hodges said, has allotted $20,000000 of its $66,000,000 budget this year to various types of social services which have pyramided with the province's population increase during the last few years.

"At the present time, the number of old age pensioners on our rolls is being increased by 500 a month. But while our costs are pyramiding, our pensions remain the highest in Canada.

Socialist promises of high pensions at 55 or 60 are based on an ignorance of economic facts which must be considered in the operation of government, she declared.

"Nobody would be more glad than I to pay higher pensions but, to do so, we would be forced to get the money from only one place-the pockets of the people."

One of the reasons for the great increases in social service costs has been the influx of people from the east, notably for a sales tax to aid their the prairies, in recent years. The three percent sales tax, she said, "is, in my opinion, the most equitable way of taxing the people—those who spend the most pay the largest share. I voted for it because I saw the only alternative was to curtail some of our services.

"I will also remind some people of a thing that they may have forgotten-it was the municipalities that asked
