AMERICAN PARATROOPS DROP; TRAP CLOSED ON COMMUNISTS

Time For Canada To Max In Its Defences

Union Playing Its Part in Support of United Nations, Federal Member Tells Men's Club

Although Canada has no thought of aggression, Applewhite, M.P. for Skeena, told a United Men's Club audience after dinner last night, spending one quarter of our budget on defence in general and the Korean situation in particular.

March Horrible

troops by North Against United Nations

Korea is the centre of attention now, the speaker said, because there the struggle against Communism has been brought into the open. "It has rung an alarm all over the world." It has accelerated military preparedness and co-operation among the allies.

Mr. Applewhite impressed on his audience the need to keep the Soviet objectives and designs in mind. Soviet imperialism is world-wide, he said. They think their slave system is in opposition to the whole world. They will make their attacks where and when the politburo thinks circumstances are favorable to them. While Korea has shown they will act with military might, he said, in other places they are operating with conspiracy and mass agitation. Those tactics are insidious and can not be overcome by military action alone. It must be supported by economic and social processes. Free society must also rid itself of the objectionable elements Soviet Communism uses for its own ends, he continued. Oppressed people are easily taken in by Soviet claims to provide satisfaction to them in their distress or privation and fail to notice the political and moral slavery they are entering into. It appeals to misguided idealism and undermines and perverts man's best aspirations.

"We must provide bread, security and freedom to win from the Communist pretenders," he said. "Otherwise we will gain their confidence."

Mr. Applewhite said Russian propaganda and espionage were weapons of Russia as well as the 170 military divisions. "We must be resourceful to win the world." He said that, although events were moving fast in Korea, the free world still faced an unmistakable military challenge and must be prepared to meet it. The problem was to know where the military angle took precedence and where it slackened off. While the fighting was still going on was the time to make plans for the peace.

MISREPRESENTATION

It was possible, he thought, that Russia thought Asia was the best place to attack and that war could be left to satellites. The war had been ridiculously misrepresented when Russia (Continued on Page 3)

U.S. Ready For 5-Power Talks

LAKE SUCCESS — The United States announced today that it was prepared to take part in a five-power meeting on problems threatening world peace.

This announcement was made in the United Nations political committee by John Foster Dulles, policy advisor to the Department of State. He warned, however, against the United States underestimating the complexities of the problems involved and said the United States should insist on agreements based on justice.

Miss Grace MacKay, regional secretary of Women's Missionary Societies of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, arrived in the city today on the Princess Louise. She will spend a week or two here working in the district.

GUARD OF HONOR—Two Korean boys with wooden guns formed a "guard of honor" when Cmdr. Robert P. Welland of McCreary, Man., and Victoria, B.C., commanding officer of the destroyer Athabaskan, landed on a South Korean island to talk with village officials. ### Minister Checks On Force A.W.L.

OTTAWA — Defence Minister Claxton today started a quick check on camps where Canada's special service force is training to get the latest figures on reports of absenteeism.

This action followed a conference between the minister and his chief advisers when they considered reports that 703 special force men were absent without leave, including at least 100 classed as deserters, absent more than 21 days.

A spokesman said the minister would try to issue a statement later today giving accurate figures on absenteeism and some comment as to the seriousness of the figures compared to the number of men involved.

Tragedy struck deeply into the life of Mrs. Mine Gidlund yesterday when the death of her husband, Gustav Adolf Gidlund, 49, left her stranded in a hotel room in a strange city. Mrs. Gidlund had brought her ailing husband to Prince Rupert General Hospital from Stewart October 10. In poor health herself, she was not able to visit her husband every day, but relied on a friend, William Logan, to see him when she could not get out.

He spent some time in Prince Rupert in 1934. On his return to Stewart he went to work as a slope cleaner in Premier mine, where he has been ever since. Latterly he has been shift boss.

In 1940 he was married at Hyder, Alaska. His widow described him as a perfect "Viking" type of man. He had a host of friends in the northern community.

Surviving besides his sorrowing widow are five brothers and four sisters in Sweden. Funeral service will be held tomorrow afternoon.
