two weeks' annual leave with pay after one year's service and three weeks after five years' service. It was prepared to offer three weeks with pay annually after one year's service and four weeks annually to everyone with ten years' service or more.

The reason for this length of holiday with pay was to take care of statutory holidays.

A PROFESSION

The firemen contended their job was a profession and that many hazards existed in Prince Rupert, more than in any other city in British Columbia of comparable size.

The city did not deny that fire fighting was hazardous but stated that only two buildings in this city of over three storeys in height existed and no industry here created any particular hazard.

The city argued that cost of living here is not 15 percent higher than Vancouver but submitted that this differential was taken care of by the award of the conciliation board in a similar dispute last year. They received a 13.6 per cent raise across the board in 1949.

"Several members of the fire department answered questions as to their specified reason for a 15% raise in wages," it was stated in the city's brief. "We suggest to the Board that no member gave a satisfactory answer, the general trend of the answers being that they wanted more money and they compared themselves to certain tradesmen who work by the hour and to halibut fishermen who work seasonally."

The city conceded to a demand by firemen that their uniforms be ordered not later than April 30 each year.

Firemen asked for an increase in the city's contribution to the Municipal Superannuation Fund to provide them with a service pension of $50 per month for the first 20 years of service and $24 yearly for each additional year over 20. In the light of present conditions, the city stated, it declined any concessions with regard to that matter.

The city also declined to pay $5 monthly service pay for fireman having served ten years and additional increase of $5 for each month following five year period.

FREE TRANSPORTATION

Firemen demanded that the city provide free bus transportation to and from duty. The city found itself under no obligation to provide this service to firemen any more than for other civic employees.

"If any bus company is willing to give such transportation, it

BLINDNESS AVERTED, PLAN MAY WEDDING—After an eye operation that may save her from blindness, Doreen Stoutenberg lies in a New York hospital, thankful to the unknown donor of the cornea which was transplanted to her eye, and dreaming of her May wedding, in London, Ont., to Lou Stacey, shown with her.
Partially blind since childhood, the sight of her one good eye was failing but the couple made plans for their wedding on May 20.
When a cornea was available in New York, she was notified and went by air for the operation. The operation is believed to be a success.

may be a factor to be taken into consideration when the question of a franchise comes up, there being no franchise at the present time," the city's brief said.
At present a first class fireman receives $224 monthly. A 2 1/2 increase would raise their wage to $230 per month.
The decision of the arbitration board will be announced next Tuesday it is expected. Both sides have agreed to abide by a majority finding.
