

MITCHELL VISITS ROYAL BUCKINGHAM PALACE

King and Queen and Princess Beth—Everything Informal and Chatty at Reception.

James Mitchell, Anyox-born son of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell of West Vancouver and grandson of R. Mitchell, who went to London as a member of the Canadian basketball team for the summer, was one of five Canadians who were present at the Dominion at a reception in London.

He met the King and Queen and Princess Elizabeth.

Queen Mary and the Duchess of Kent were standing together but I did little more than say "Hello."

"Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip showed great interest in basketball. Elizabeth had played a girl's game called netball. I spent some time explaining the difference between the games."

"The members of the Royal Family were not as tall as I had thought. The Queen was most gracious. The King was very friendly and laughed heartily. Elizabeth did most of the talking while Philip seemed content to back her up. Princess Elizabeth is very much like her mother."

As for the basketball games, the Canadians had played three games when the letter was written including the one they lost to Hungary. "We played very poorly. The shots would not go in the basket, most of them hitting the hoop. The referees were European and gave us a raw deal."

Smiles and Chuckles

The famous psychologist had just delivered a most interesting lecture, and was now conducting a question session.

A timid little man down front held up his hand and was recognized.

"Doctor," he said most respectfully, "did I understand you to say that a good poker player could successfully handle any sort of executive job?"

"That's exactly what I said," was the confident reply.

"Tell me, Doctor," asked the little man, "what would a good poker play want with a job?"

Three small boys were bragging about the prowess of their dads. The first boy said, "My dad writes out a few short lines on a paper, called a poem, sends it away and gets ten dollars for it."

"My dad," spoke the second "makes some dots on a piece of paper, calls it a song, sends it away and gets $25 for it."

"That's nothing," declared the third boy. "My father writes out a sermon on a sheet of paper gets up in a pulpit and reads it, and it takes four men to bring in the money."

The landlord of offices tenanted by a firm of Scots lawyers whose lease was about to expire wrote to ask whether they were going to continue occupation. Their reply was:

"Dear Sir: We are, Yours truly—"

Not appreciating this effort in economy of words—and paper—he wrote again to demand whether or not it was their intention to remain. The answer was:

"Dear Sir: We remain, Yours truly—"

The landlord is not trying again.

A surveyor walking around an army outpost on the edge of a western town became acquainted with the soldier who fired the cannon for retreat every evening.

"Do you fire the cannon at the same time each evening?" he asked.

"Yes," the soldier replied. "At six o'clock on the dot, and I time it carefully with this watch. And just to make doubly sure, I check the watch every day by the big clock in a jeweller's window about two blocks from here."

Several days later the surveyor entered the jeweller's shop. "That's a mighty fine clock you have there," he said, indicating the clock in the window.

"It keeps perfect time," answered the jeweller. "Why, that clock has not varied a second in two years."

"That's really a wonderful record."

"Yes, and we have a check on it, too. Every evening at exactly six o'clock they fire a cannon over at the fort, and my clock is always right on the dot."
