

Boxing Bill Looks Good

Exciting Show Looked For From Paul Kennedy and Norm Applin

With top bill performers such as Paul Kennedy, 25 year old middleweight negro from Portland, and Norm Applin, formerly of Montreal but late of this city, Friday night's bouts at the Civic Centre should be exciting.

The 152-pound negro arrived by plane Tuesday. The trip didn't faze him and he declared he would rather stay away from bus trips. Paul has been in the fighting game since 1947, a very short period. And in that time, he's piled up quite a few victories.

friendly fighter said he has battled his way through ten professional bouts, winning eight. He has chalked up 18 amateur bouts, winning 15 in a row and then walked away with the Golden Gloves trophy.

Most stubborn fighter he has met was Dick Wolf of Vancouver in 1948. The boys confronted each other on six occasions. Four turned out as draws. Each won a decision. Paul hopes for another meeting with Wolf. It will be different this time, he declares.

His most severe beating was administered by 164-pound Frank Gimbel but Gimbel didn't score a knockout. "I wish it would have been a knockout," Paul declared, "I had 13 stitches put in across one eye."

Paul formerly trained with Joey Maxim, present light heavyweight champion of the world.

The boxer is married and has three children, the oldest of whom is four years. "I'm training him early," he said.
