Progressive-Conservative leader in the province, arrived in Terrace on Friday afternoon coming in by car from the coast and leaving the next morning for interior points accompanied by Mr. Merryfield. While here they were entertained to dinner by the president of the local Board of Trade, C. J. Norrington, and Mrs. Norrington, J. H. Stevenson, secretary of the Board of Trade here, completed the party. Later in the evening they adjourned to the Oddfellows' Hall where Mr. Anscomb addressed a meeting of the Board of Trade.

Being no stranger to the district, Mr. Anscomb expressed his pleasure at being here once again and spoke of the remarkable growth that had taken place since he first came here in 1917. He spoke on the P.G.E. and the problem of taking it into the Peace River to reach the vast wealth of high grade coal and oil in that area. He mentioned the cellulose pulp plant at Port Edward which would bring prosperity to the whole district. The Aluminum Company was still investigating possibilities of establishing here. All they have asked is permission to come here and harness the water which is running off to the sea.

Mr. Anscomb spoke on highways and the systematic development for the main highways of B.C. for which he felt that the Federal government should pay 50 per cent of the cost. The minister of finance spoke on the increase of Social Service from which there could never be any economic returns.

With the influx of population more schools were needed and more money was being budgeted each year to education.

The speaker disclosed that, in the past 18 months, 200,000 persons in B.C. had entered hospital and left without having to pay any bill. Hospital Insurance was a gigantic undertaking for the government and more co-operation was needed between the public, the doctors and the government to prevent undue advantage being taken of it, for, it was shown, that the average patient stayed two days longer in hospital than previously. This was keeping others from getting the hospitalization they needed. New hospitals are needed and, while the government is interested in constructing them, they are definitely not interested in operating them.

In the question period which followed his address, Mr. Anscomb disclosed that he was very much in favor of hospital sweepstakes as in the old country.

Mentioning the 3% tax the speaker said that it had been successful mainly because one third of it goes to the municipalities.

Mr. Anscomb, in closing his "Story of Government," an address which had been essentially non-political all the way through, spoke on the bright future of the province as long as a sane view is taken and the expenditure does not get out of hand.

Better Garbage Service Needed

Dr. Duncan Black, director of the Prince Rupert Health Unit, at a meeting of the board last week, expressed concern over the amount of indiscriminate dumping of garbage that still prevails in this city. "This condition must be rectified," he warned, "or we will have a serious rat situation on our hands."

There is a city by-law, the doctor said, prohibiting such disposal of garbage and there is also a by-law which states that all garbage for collection must be kept in a metal container with suitable lid.

Dr. Black reported that A. G. Boas, sanitary inspector, has recently spent considerable time going into the garbage disposal problem.

"Prince Rupert has grown tremendously in the last few years and both Mr. Stewart, the city engineer, and Mr. Boas feel that the time has come for the garbage collection service to be expanded. They suggested that an additional truck, with two men, be hired to make collections every morning in the downtown area exclusively, thus leaving the existing truck for the residential areas."

After considerable discussion by the board, it was decided that a letter be sent to the city council explaining the need of expansion of service and asking for their co-operation.

Dr. Black and Mr. Boas both expressed the desire that in the future, issuance of trade licenses, particularly for restaurants and rooming houses, and plumbing

RCMP Personnel Team on Tour

A "purely exploratory" personnel survey of B.C. provincial police is being made by a three man team from the RCMP this week. Inspectors Engel and LaPoint and Cpl. Brooke arrived last night on the Coquitlam to make the inspection regarding the proposed change to Mounted Police provincial policing. In all, 32 men in the district from here to Burns Lake will take tests.

permits, be passed by the police, fire department and Health Unit. This would enable the various departments to keep a closer check on conditions in the city. It was decided to send a letter to city council regarding the matter.
