Use More Fish

THE FISHING INDUSTRY, which has been enjoying a seller's market these many years, is now seriously considering ways and means of developing the domestic markets so as to stave off what might be a serious slump in the disposal of fishery products. Such a slump might be keenly felt at this port of Prince Rupert through falling off of the high price level-a falling off which many expect even this year.

Progress has already been made, and it has been well illustrated at this port, in the way of handling and preparing fish. It is interesting to compare methods of processing today with ten years or so when about all that was done was to bundle the whole fish in bulk out of the boats, trim it up a bit, hastily ice or otherwise preserve it, load it into boxes or barrels and rush it off to the markets.

However, there is still much more to be done in the way of promoting fish as a delicacy and a regular food. Fish and shellfish products, properly packaged, could be made six-day-a-week items and not just for Friday consumption. There should be agressive advertising and promotion to educate the housewife and her family on the goodness, the healthfulness and the wide varieties of fish products which are available, and capable of such quick and tasty preparation.

Both Canada and the United States have been remiss in developing fally the markets of their respective countries for fish and shellfish. A fivepound per capita increase in consumption in both countries would, it is said, absorb all the production that could be attained presently by either country.

And the popularizing of fish as a food could well enough be started right here in Prince Rupert which, although a fish port, probably is not any better in its average per capita fish consumption than other parts of the country.

COALITION FIRST

"/ NE WOULD have to be extraordinarily Inaive," says the Vancouver Province "not to expect a good deal of political juggling and horsetrading behind the (provincial coalition) nominating platforms. Unfortunately, the task of ment under his management nominating candidates who are pledged to support our provincial coalition government is complicated by bursts of friction between the party organizations in the various ridings.

"We have had an example of this sort of thing in Esquimalt and there is a danger of it happening again in other constituencies unless Coalition supporters realize that they are pledged to back the Coalition and that their first loyalty is to that Coalition, not to any single party.

"Delegates to Coalition nominating conventions must work for harmony and unanimity behind the scenes as well as in front of them.

"Coalition nominating conventions should remember that any darned fool can start a fight. They should remember, too, that both political : parties and the public have demonstrated pretty convincingly that they want the Coalition to continue as a strong, harmonious entity.

"Those who try to rock the boat just before an election are certainly not going to be appreciated by anyone but the socialists. They, of course, are going to laugh their heads off."

"GREATEST STORY" Editor, Daily News:

J. Hrynyk, Principal of Smithers Public School, had been reading part of the "Greatest Story Ever Told," referred to in your April 19 editorial as "risking orthodox."

Later, in the play ground, a "tough" boy was heard to remark to a pal:

"Gee, that's an interesting story he's reading us now."

The hearer was sufficiently impressed to report the incidents to his mother, who believes the news worth passing in. We need a lot more of this sort of thing. Vital facts presented with sufficient "breeziness"-to quote the editorial-to make them interesting. Mere

Just before payday you've probably looked at what's left of your wages or housekeeping money and said: "Where does the money go?" A company must ask itself the same question, and each year provides the answer in its annual report

The dollars we received last year-for gasoline, kerosene, fuel oil and other products-went this way:

Crude Oil and other raw materials we needed to make the products took the first big slice. Depending on where you live your oil may have come from Arabia, from South America, or from deep in the United States. In Canada only Alberta produced crude in quantity.

Manufacturing and packaging came next-complex and intricate refining operations are needed to make the hundreds of oil products which find thousands of uses in our homes and industries, on our highways, in the air and on the sea.

Transportation was the next big biteproducts must move over wide areas to serve all communities in Canada.

Marketing was fourth. Marketing provides the products you need wherever you are-power, heat and lubricants for factory, farm and home. Marketing supplies that local businessman, the dealer; and if you're a fuel oil user, keeps oil in your tank!

Taxes to provincial and federal governments absorbed 7.06 cents. And this does 7.06 cents not include gasoline tax, which—depending on where you live—takes from 22 to 35 cents out of every dollar you spend for standard grade gasoline.

Profit was 4.9 cents out of each sales dollar. From this we paid three cents to 4.90 cents shareholders as dividends. The rest was used -together with a lot more money we borrowed and still more obtained by sales of investments—to help meet your increasing
