A Push For Rupert

It is encouraging to note the keen interest in the port of Prince Rupert which the communities of the central interior manifested last week at the annual convention of the Associated Boards of Trade of Central British Columbia by resolutions which they presented and were adopted by the convention.

Such enthusiasm on the part of the interior communities and their perception of the importance of Prince Rupert becoming a real active port which would bring benefit to them should be salutary to Prince Rupert itself which seems of late to have lost some of its pep in furthering such matters as this.

The Associated Boards of Trade convention was, apparently, a very enthusiastic affair. It is to be hoped some of that enthusiasm will be absorbed in Prince Rupert itself in the campaign for various objectives.

DEMOCRACIES ARMING

It was natural enough that, in the postwar years, the democracies should have disarmed themselves even below the limits of safety. For, in the early postwar years, the danger of another war seemed utterly remote and indeed unreal.

That realization has already produced in the quickly organized and co-ordinated Atlantic defence system this potentially most formidable military strength that the world has ever known.

And, for that, the essential thing is to mobilize in every country the maximum popular support for the maximum effort which its government can make.

FISHING STILL MAINSTAY

DECISION of the Canadian Fishing Co. to move its salmon cannery and fish processing plant from historic Carlisle cannery on the Skeena River to the Canadian National Railways ocean dock on the Prince Rupert waterfront will bring a new payroll of 150 persons to the city and, combined with the operations of the company already in existence here, will make a substantial and very direct source of production and employment.

As time goes on and, in view of the expansion and new developments in the fish processing industry, the operations of Canadian Fishing, and other companies as well, may be expected to become more widespread and more round the year in scope.

Other industrial developments notwithstanding, Prince Rupert can still count on fishing as its mainstay industry and the principal basis of the city's increasing prosperous economy.

The new project of Canadian Fishing in Prince Rupert marks further centralization of the industry here.

CAMPERS AT CHURCH

HERE WE ARE at Camp Elphinstone, one of the YMCA's public affairs institutes. Here on the west coast of Canada they do in a modest way what the Y does each year with such national usefulness at Lake Couchiching, in Ontario.

This year we have about a hundred people of all ages. That is, they range from girls still wearing pigtails (I love them) to dignified old grandpops from as far east as Saskatchewan.

TWO OF THE liveliest discussions to date arose following Cliff Robinson's statement that art was the only medium which gave human beings a truly world wide bond.

Upshot of the discussions was that we will try to make a list of the institutions and activities which really do tend to unite all mankind.

THIS MORNING we all went to the chapel service, held in God's natural cathedral, that is in the open woods. It was, and still is the kind of day which just naturally makes you glad to be alive.

Another prow of another ancient craft serves as background for the preacher. Today's preacher was a layman—Ernest Perrault of the U.B.C. Extension Department.

That each human being is a truly unique creature. There has never been before, and there never will be again, a personality exactly like you; that there are infinite powers on which you and I may draw by prayer to make our unique lives justify their creation.

THIS LITTLE chapel in the woods is a sacred and beloved place to the thousands of boys who have gone through this camp in the many, many years it has been operating.

Before the natural stump-altar the boys themselves have placed stones on which they have painted the names of the values they associate with God and their religion. I counted 40 of these boy-painted stones, and noted gladly that they included "gentleness" as well as the more rugged virtues like "courage" and "loyalty."

I went back alone this afternoon and studied those stones one by one. For there I saw the story of the values of Canadian Christian boyhood. I smiled to note that they had left out the one the Chinese would have made Number 1—politeness, or courtesy. However, the young Canucks have included obedience.
