Indignation Over Condition of Floats—Submarine Freezing—Coddling and Flat-fishing Poor

Action of the Prince Rupert Liberal Association this week in protesting at the continued disrepair of the Cow Bay floats and insisting on early and effective repair action meets with general approval. The floats have, indeed become in a deplorable condition, involving menace not only to the many boats which use the floats but also to life and limb. In spite of newer and more modern floats, Cow Bay is still the centre of temporary mooring at Prince Rupert due to its central location. It is estimated that some 300 to 400 boats have been there this week and there will be more this week-end with the forthcoming native basketball tournament next week.

For the past few weeks, residents of Skidegate have been in a state of disbelief. On the shores of Skidegate Inlet lay enormous amounts of dead fish. During the January cold spell in that area someone had remarked that fresh water cooling systems for engines in fishing vessels had frozen. An incursion of this type is rare in this area. Hearing the statement, an imperial Oil sent a thermometer to a depth of three feet. The mercury dropped

Cesar Ritz, who left his native Swiss mountains as a boy to work in a Paris tavern and moved steadily upward in hotel business to launch the Ritz Hotel in Paris. Later he joined forces with William Harris, a London chartered accountant, to open the Ritz Hotel in London. In time a group of hotels in Europe and elsewhere were linked in a Ritz chain.

Then Robert W. Goetlet, a rich New York landowner, and an architectural firm organized a New York hotel to be built at Madison Avenue and 46th street, patterned after the Ritz hotels of Paris and London. In December, 1910, it opened its doors.

"On opening night we served an 11-course dinner," recalls Louis Diat, head chef who has been in the hotel's service since its opening. "One chef made 2,000 blinis for caviar and finally fainted at his stove."

Many others such as Charles Silvani, maitre d'hotel, and Steve Terzaho, headwaiter, served the Ritz for years and are known to hundreds of its patrons.

The aim of the Ritz was to provide food, surroundings and service which would make those who lived in magnificent houses and palaces feel at home.

CLAXTON RIDES JET—Defence Minister Claxton climbs out of a U.S.A.F. jet fighter-trainer after a short flight at Whitehorse, Y.T., at conclusion of Exercise Sweetbriar. The minister handed the controls briefly. His comment on landing was "you don't get the sensation of going twice as fast as ever before—it's as smooth as silk." He is met by Air Marshal W. A. Curtis, who later made his first jet flight. (CP Photo)

Nome Seeking More Tourists

FAIRBANKS—The Northwest-ern Alaska Chamber of Commerce of Nome has organized a tourist committee with definite instructions to promote tourist travel. Summer travel, says the secretary, does not need encouragement. There is need, though, to popularize winter and spring touring and at the same time, the Alaska residents have more time to receive and entertain the visitors. In summer, the Alaskans are busy with their industries and have not the same leisure.

Hydrogen Bomb May Not Work

LAKE SUCCESS—There is a chance of the hydrogen bomb failing to work even after a year's experimentation. There is a possibility of it being a dud. This is the view held by Dr. H. C. Wolfe, chairman of the Federation of American Scientists. Bertrand Russell, British author, says people have been talking about the expected end of the world for centuries. Life is hard to get rid of altogether.
