ENJOY CANADIAN WAY OF LIFE—From Esthonia to Kitchener, Ont., is more than 8,800 miles, but to two young refugees who helped sail their tiny refugee sloop across the Atlantic, it was an adventure of the sea that was to terminate on the Canadian National Railways. The perilous voyage took 75 days and climaxed in a three year search for freedom. Today, Michael Kadarik and Mikelis Sicevs are re-establishing themselves in the country of their adoption in a section gang laying 100-pound 39-foot rail on the Grimsby subdivision, between Jordan and Grimsby, Ont. Their first job with the C.N.R. was packing ice at Stratford, Ont. for use in the air-conditioned and refrigerator cars. Upon completion of that work, they were transferred to rail-laying operations. The young men are two of a group of 23 men and women whose desire to find freedom in another part of the world was so great that they braved the Baltic sea in a rowboat and spent weeks crossing the Atlantic in a frail 45-foot boat. Sicevs, left, and Kadarik, are seen here taking out section of rail, which is to be replaced by a new 39-foot rail shown behind them.
