Reminiscences
By W. J. — and REFLECTIONS

Jessen's Weekly plant destroyed by fire early in the winter, is now being rebuilt. The cost of one of the linotypes is $15,000. Thinking of starting a little paper? It's such an interesting line of endeavour.

Within twenty-five years, say men given to study and of some vision, it will be possible to travel to the moon in a rocket. The estimated distance is only 258,000 miles and the time 48 hours. Why smile that derisive smile? Half a century ago, had anyone foretold pictures that moved and talked, listening to somebody singing or conversing on the other side of the globe, flying miles high and the disappearance of horses his mental balance might have been questioned.

Tomorrow, February 22, is the birthday anniversary of George Washington, himself of English ancestry. He could never have imagined such a difference between a couple of other Georges—the Third and the Sixth.

British Columbia, seen in the middle of a mean winter, still has power to enchant. Colonel A. S. Lancaster, Tenth Gurka Rifles, on leave from his post as military attache to the British Embassy in Afghanistan, has been spending a few days on the coast for the first time. "Beautiful as Kashmir," he remarked, taking a look around. The terse colonel said it.

The new Canadian Army dress will include bedroom slippers and pyjamas, bath towels, gabardine rain coats, and zippered overshoes. There has, however, been negligence. Some one forgot to order the regulation quantity of toilet water.

The exporting of motorclothes to Soviet Russia made the British House of Commons laugh, when advised to that effect by Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade. To picture Premier Stalin wearing one, somehow struck the Attlee government in its most sensitive funny bone—and it's not at all surprising.

With all the heavy work necessary in fighting Nature, now going on, one is reminded of the time Billy Vaughan Davies, now in Victoria, played a minor role in that sort of thing. Playing is right. One evening in the Presbyterian Church he was accompanying a solo. The composition called for smiting the piano keys, to smite them thrice, and loud enough, to be something like modified thunder. Not far away bull-dozers were at work at the dry dock site, and from that quarter came three blasts, at precisely the same time that Mr. Davies was getting in his work in the church. They synchronized perfectly. Anyone would have been excused for rising and bowing his acknowledgments.

Diefenbaker For Less Ill-Will

OTTAWA—Less ill-will of a personal nature, while speaking on the floor of the House is urged by John G. Diefenbaker, Progressive-Conservative of Lake Centre, Saskatchewan. Speaking before crowded galleries he deplored examples of "declarations of hatred and contempt." He asked for a return of "parliamentary amenities. The exchange of terms of abuse had been true of all sides of the House. "During the past two or three days," said Mr. Diefenbaker, "things have been said which might well have been left unsaid."

SHOOTS PRIEST IN CATHOLIC CHURCH

NEW YORK—An unknown man walked into a Roman Catholic Church of St. John the Martyr, in this city, and un-wrapping a rifle, fired into a confessional, wounding a priest, Rev. Vincent J. Campbell, in the leg. He then fled, pursued by a woman, who lost sight of him within a few blocks. The wounding was not serious.

WINTER HARD ON SMALL BIRDS

This has been a rough winter on the coast and its effects have been felt not only by humans, who, despite unusually heavy snowfall's, have never been without food or shelter but on wild life as well.
Particularly hard hit by the snow blanket which shuts off their source of food are the birds which remain here to brighten the winter months. Bird lovers say that when deep snow covers the ground, as it has done for the last few months, the small creatures are almost entirely dependent on human aid to survive.

Cold and lack of food can cause the small birds to perish in great numbers. In some areas is difficult to find the few types of birds still make their towns and cities. While cross-gulls are still prising to the junkies, blue jays which need a source of little snowed under. The only help through people to find food out for them.
