

Exposure of Death

Death of Philip Victor was found by a coroner's yesterday afternoon to have some time Thursday from alcoholism and in the entrance to a beyond the end of Comox... whose body was found on a boat at Cow Bay in broken condition. Charlie with him as far as the of Third Avenue and First where he "passed out." then went for a cab, took them to the end of Avenue. With the help of Philip's brother Howard, they tried to get Philip home, but were unsuccessful. Howard later moved him under the partial cover of the entranceway where he was found dead. Howard said Philip was alive when he had last seen him about 7 a.m. Thursday.

The evidence of Dr. L. M. Greene was that, after examining the body, he had found no evidence of foul play. In his opinion death was due to over-indulgence in alcohol and exposure. The contusions found on his face and marks on the body would not be factors contributing to the death.
Jurors were William Clark, foreman, Rene VanWalleghan, Henry Hanson, James Kelly, Oscar Hovdebo, Leo Micholuk.
Mr. and Mrs. F. Lambert will be passengers on the southbound trip of the Chilcotin tomorrow night for Vancouver.

Sgt. Potterton To Court House

Former divisional headquarters of the provincial police in the basement floor of the Court House, which the police radio operator has had to himself for the past three months since Inspector F. B. Woods-Johnson left here after the Royal Canadian Mounted Police took over the B.C. Police, is to be occupied again as area headquarters.
Sergeant L. A. N. Potterton, whose promotion to take over command of northwest British Columbia was announced this week, will now make his headquarters there.
Corp. A. E. Wales is now the city chief following the promotion of Sgt. Potterton to the wider duties.
