Ray Reflects . . . . . . and Reminisces

The site of the new hotel is right where the whole of Prince Rupert once congregated to do business. There was Centre Street and the wharf, Rupert Road and Vickersville over yonder. About all else was newly cleared town-site. There was Arthur Little, who started in business with a handful of papers and some tobacco. George Morrow spread out his meat for sale. Fred Stork ran a hardware store. R. L. Macintosh was postmaster aided by J. R. Morison and others. Billy Shrubbsall chuckled, and sold hallout George Philpott made a garden for Bacon the harbor engineer. Ham Douglas talked politics and predicted great things.

Stalin is reported to have reviewed a military parade on May Day, doing this engulfed in a sea of red bunting. It couldn't have been Stalin's photograph, by any chance?

It's pleasant to think of the Navy striving just as hard to preserve a life, as to take it. H.M. C. S. Sioux, swift destroyer, is back from a 600-mile dash in wild weather to take a sailor off a Greek freighter. With a ruptured appendix, he needed a surgeon the worst way. The destroyer provided both speed and operating table.

Britain's government was saved by a single vote the other night. If Attlee isn't extra careful it may become a habit.

There come frequent reminders of Federal parliament being a busy place. But there was time enough, not long ago, for somebody to devote a few hours to the alleged necessity of a Canadian flag. And in Vancouver last week, it was suggested at Women's Club meeting that "O Canada," top-heavy with versions, could do with a new national anthem. So far, the chief difficulty seems to be Canada cannot discover what she wants.

Replying to the query "are bachelors happier than married men?" in a coast daily, a pair of columnists say they are not. They just whistle louder. They show a higher suicide rate and are less healthy. Besides, the married men live about twenty years longer and when they do die, it's less often from heart disease, pneumonia or tuberculosis. The married man is better fed, given better attention and gets proper sleep. In illness his wife nurses him and, when emotionally disturbed, that's taken care of, too. And most important of all, he has such a sense of well being.

Can't understand the foregoing. We have never dreamed of suicide. Been in hospital twice (military and civilian) served as palibearer at funerals of numerous married men. Never worried. Never heeded solemn counsel about liquor and food. Unable to recall emotional disturbances unless when spanked where it would do most good by some muscular woman with a shingle. Always enjoy deep sleep, when not observing dog-cursing period between 4:15 a.m. and breakfast hour. Have lived well over seventy. Feel fine. Whistle daily.

Norman Nelson, president of Nelson Brothers Fisheries of Vancouver, arrived in the city aboard the Prince Rupert today on a business trip.

Miss Winnie Poxon, who has operated a beauty parlor here for the past five years, has sold out her business and in a week or so will be leaving the city. She will visit in the Okanagan district on her way to her home in Drumheller, Alberta, where she expects to make an extended stay with her parents.
