to the front door of the apartment and was told to wait. A short while later he noticed Mah wave to him so he drove to the rear of the building. At this point, Miss McMasters recalled, the Chinese had the revolver in his coat pocket.

The woman stated that she had tried to act nervous in order to attract attention but the taxi operator testified he had noticed nothing wrong and added that Mah appeared normal but may "have been a little upset."

Ebbett also recalled that Mah had once remarked that his insurance policies would be transferred if "she didn't come back to him." Asked by Cpl. A. E. Wales, in charge of the inquest, if he had noticed a gun, Ebbett said he hadn't seen a gun.

On previous occasions, the woman said, the Chinese had threatened her and in one instance had attempted to choke her.

Letters were produced in court. Two were written by the Chinese, the other by Miss McMasters. Mah had written the letters, dated February 14 and 16. Miss McMasters, in her letter, stated that she "would be getting married in two weeks" and suggested that Mah stop bothering her.

Inside Mah's room in the hotel, the woman had told the Chinese that his intentions were "very foolish" in regard to threatening her with a revolver. While she was sitting on his bed, he stood at the bedroom doorway, holding the .32 calibre five cylinder revolver in his hand. She stated that her suggestion was to "figure things out" and attempt to settle the friction between them.

"He said he would get me dead or alive," Miss McMasters stated. "I said I wouldn't come back."

"We'll see about that," Mah said.

She stated they had argued for a while and that he made advances before he fired.

"Like from a distance, I could hear another shot," she said. She added that after she had risen, she noticed him on the floor, then ran out the door and down the stairs where an ambulance later picked her up.

Investigation by police later revealed that four shots had been fired. The other two entered the wall and floor of the bedroom. Another witness, B. Anderson, who resided further down the hall of the rooming house, stated that he had been awakened by three shots.

Police could offer no explanation for the two extra slugs.

Also, it was noticed that the Chinese had powder burns on both hands. Police say he probably held the gun in both hands as the cocking mechanism of the 1900 model revolver was damaged.

Other witnesses testifying at the inquest, conducted over by Coroner M. M. Stephens, were Sgt. Lance Potterton, Dr. L. M. Green, Const. John Brady, and Const. Jack White.

Jurymen were, Foreman D. Frizzell, Alfred Rivett, Stewart Donaldson, W. J. Scott, Don Llewellyn and Libero Basso Bert.
