JUST over twenty years ago, pioneers opening up new frontiers in Canada had no medical aid within reach. In case of accident or emergency, the nearest doctor was usually 100 miles or more away.

Today, a chain of 71 Red Cross Outpost Hospitals serve many isolated districts and form their only source of medical aid.

In an average year over 44,000 patients are treated in these hospitals, nearly 600 clinics are held, many thousands of children receive medical examinations, and over 2,000 babies are born.

This work is vital to Canada's development. It is one of the many "missions of mercy" you set out upon when you give to the Canadian Red Cross.

Your dollars are also needed to carry on Red Cross work:

- ... For crippled children
- ... Disaster Relief
- ... Nation-wide Blood Transfusion Service
- ... Nutritional and First Aid Services
- ... And many other services of inestimable value to every Canadian.

THE WORK OF MERCY NEVER ENDS
