40 Years Palace Superintendent, He Takes Royal Secrets Into Retirement

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON—Mark Seymour—a man with a load of secrets about the Royal Family—retires from his post as superintendent of Buckingham Palace tomorrow.

He has worked at the Palace, under four different reigns, for nearly 40 years and in 1947 the King made him a member of the Victorian Order.

The duties of Palace superintendent are numerous. Besides being a Royal Home, the Palace also resembles a museum of art treasures.

As superintendent, 60-year-old Seymour has been responsible for the safe keeping of all these things. Upkeep and supply of furniture and fittings in the private apartments of the King and Queen and Princess Margaret all come within his scope.

His chief wartime job was looking after the deep bomb shelters constructed under the Palace for use of the Royal Family. He was also responsible for the day and night efficiency of the Palace's air-raid warning system.

For years newspaper men and other inquisitive folk have tried unsuccessfully to get superintendent Seymour to talk about life within the Palace walls. His response is invariably a quiet smile and a shake of the head.

Just recently Seymour has been a target for questions about the postponed Royal Tour of Australia and New Zealand and the rumor that it may take place in 1951. Whatever Seymour knows he keeps strictly to himself, but in Royal circles 1952 it thought to be the most likely year.

Since his retirement was announced, the Palace superintendent has been approached by many newspapers for an interview. He switches them to the press officer; for members of the Royal household are instructed not to give interviews under any circumstances.

King Edward VII was still on the throne when Seymour first went to the Palace as a junior on the superintendent's staff in 1909. Successively he served under King George V, Edward VIII (now the Duke of Windsor) and the present King. He was promoted from assistant superintendent to superintendent in 1939.

Seymour will be succeeded by

York City to Lose Famous Wee Street

YORK, England—Soon there won't be any more Whipma-Whopmagate.

This is the name of an ancient byway which York townsfolk say is the shortest street in the world. It is to be demolished, along with the Old George hotel and other buildings, to make way for a new road. Whipma-Whopmagate is 55 feet in length. No one knows why it is called Whipma-Whopmagate, though some antiquaries think that it used to be the scene of public whippings. Emily Bronte is among famous guests

Stanley Williams, at present superintendent of Windsor Castle.

No name has been chosen for the new thoroughfare. Some people say it should be called—Whipma-Whopmagate.

"Both Were Contented Carnation Babies"

MANY, many mothers with diet and experience have used Carnation formula. But you don't have to be a dietitian to use Carnation formula.

Carnation is widely accepted as the best for infant feeding. Homogenization and sterilization make Carnation unusually digestible and agreeable with babies; evaporation makes so that it can be exactly diluted to suit sterilization brings it to your home and pure. Ask your doctor about a Carnation for your baby.

Kelburne and Sidney Leitch—both fine husky Carnation babies... Says Mrs. Leitch—"We had never a day of worry over the babies' Carnation feedings. And the Carnation formula was so easy to prepare. No wonder there are so many Carnation babies in the world."
