believed that state ownership was detrimental to progress, was unalterably opposed to communism, no matter in what guise it might rear its ugly head. Liberalism was capable of meeting new problems with new methods and fresh outlook. Liberalism was based on the time-tested philosophy of the brotherhood of man and the dignity of the individual. To place the state before the human individual and family must surely be repugnant to the best in Canadian thinking. Above all things, hard won political freedom must be preserved for, without political freedom, how could there be other freedoms?

MAKING DEMOCRACY WORK

There was no room in Canada for complacency and letting things drift, no room for an attitude of regimentation under a superstate. Democracy must be kept in good working order. The Liberal government had shown that it could make democracy work. All that needed to be cited were one or two of its achievements in the postwar period. It had been predicted that postwar deflation would leave a million and a half Canadians on the bread line. But what has been the case? Demobilization had been carried out and if anything, there had been increased prosperity. Canada had received the best postwar government of any country in the world. Taxes had been reduced by over a billion dollars since the war and the national debt had been reduced by $1,026,000,000. Tax reductions had been made on personal incomes and the little corporations while the tax on big business had been increased. Was that not democracy? Liberals in fifteen years had given Canada practically all the advertised benefits of Socialism—but none of the detriments—old age pensions, pensions for the blind, unemployment insurance, family allowances, all fine examples of making democracy work for the benefit of the people.

MR. MAYHEW

Mr. Mayhew said that his visit to Prince Rupert had been something he had long anticipated. He had been impressed with the efficiency of the fish handling facilities here. The minister discussed the importance of the fisheries in the economy of Canada and expressed confidence as to the expanding future of the industry. Canada's fishery potential was the greatest in the world, even greater now that Newfoundland had joined Confederation. He told of the careful planning by government looking to the development of the fisheries and the promotion of domestic markets in the interior of the country by the improvement of methods during transport of fish from the coasts. Conservation and scientific research plans were referred to by the minister. He had a group of men in his department of whom he was proud, declared Mr. Mayhew.

The duty of good government was to increase the happiness of the people and the minister said that such was his own motivating spirit.

His latest trip through British Columbia had been a great inspiration, said Mr. Mayhew. With such opportunities for private enterprise, it was difficult to believe there were those who would try to prevent those opportunities being taken advantage of. In the woods, on the streams, and on the lands was room for thousands upon thousands of people to conduct their own affairs.

New schools being built, demands for post offices and public buildings, all were indications of life and prosperity.

Mr. Mayhew could see no impending slump in Canada or reason to play bear with one's own country.

DEFINITE ISSUE

The minister saw as the very definite issue in this election whether an honest, aggressive, competent and experienced government should be retained. "I believe that since 1935 Canada has had the best government in its history," he asserted. In 1935 it had been called upon to lift Canada out of the slough of economic despond. Had it not been an aggressive government, what would have happened in the war? As it was, Canada had made the greatest per capita contribution of any nation in the world both in point of fighting men and in production for the war effort at home. It had made vast gifts to the Motherland, had given tremendous aid to the nations of Europe, all of which had, of course, contributed to the prosperity of the Dominion and very especially to British Columbia. A great job had been done by such ministers as Howe, Gardiner and Mitchell. Now were coming up the younger men to give a happy balance, such as Claxton, Abbott, Paul Martin, Chevrier, Garson, Pearson, Winters.

Mr. Mayhew pointed to the government's record of social legislation and industrial development. In trade relations, he referred to the elimination of the tariff on fresh fish. Next year he hoped this would be extended to canned fish.

The government had been criticized for not having had an election last fall. The recent election of Mr. St. Laurent, the impending entry of Newfoundland into Confederation, the negotiation of the Atlantic Pact he cited as reasons why no election could have been held at that time. Furthermore, there was necessity to have another session of Parliament so that such controls as were necessary including rentals could be extended. As for the last session, he blamed obstructionary tactics by the Opposition for having prevented some of the business being completed.

"If you have a good government," concluded Mr. Mayhew, "should you not treat it as you would a good employee? One never changes a manager when he is making a success of a business. This government has done all and more than was expected of it and has done it well. I see a great future for Canada with St. Laurent."

The only questioner at the meeting was James N. Kelly who wanted to know why a new lighthouse tender had not been built at Prince Rupert instead of Victoria and who was critical of the minister of fisheries.

Mrs. A. Phillipson is sailing Sunday night on the Coquitlam for Vancouver where she will spend the next fortnight on holidays.

Constable Ted Brue of the Terrace detachment, provincial police, arrived in the city this morning by air following a brief trip to Vancouver.

Restless Nights

Often mid-life brings on troublesome irregularities in kidney functioning, an affliction which responds well to magnesium treatment, (MAG-NOPILLS). Burning sensations, painful twitches are relieved, and the bladder returns to normal. The patient feels an almost immediate change for the better in his whole being. Magnopills are for sale at all Drug Stores.

THIS KIND OF UNCERTAINTY COULD RUIN BRITISH COLUMBIA

FOR CANADA
A National Aim of Socialism:
"No C.C.F. Government will rest content until it has eradicated capitalism"

(Regina Manifesto of the C. C. F.)

IN SASKATCHEWAN

"We will not rest until capitalism has been eradicated from Saskatchewan." (Premier Douglas in the Legislature, April 1946.)

"The C.C.F. government has no intention of eliminating private enterprise or private ownership in Saskatchewan." (Premier Douglas in the Legislature, April 1947.)

"Let me give this assurance to the businessmen of Saskatchewan, that they need have no fear of government interference in any legitimate business undertaking which is rendering a service to the community and does not constitute a monopoly." (Premier Douglas in statement to the Associated Boards of Trade, June 1947.)

In March 1949, Premier Douglas was asked if his government still stood behind the Regina Manifesto and its announced objective of "eradicating capitalism." The Premier replied: "The answer is Yes." He described the manifesto as "the best political document ever drafted in this country."

Investment capital is NOT being risked in Saskatchewan.

IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

"C.C.F. AND INVESTMENT"

"Harold Winch, C.C.F. provincial leader, declared that Socialists lie in their teeth when they say B.C. cannot be developed under the C.C.F. "Investment capital will go anywhere where resources can be developed and where they can get a square deal. The C.C.F. will give a square deal in B.C. to anyone developing resources as long as they recognize that the C.C.F. government is going to give a square deal to the people to whom the resources belong." (From the Vancouver Sun, May 16, 1947.)

The C.C.F. party in British Columbia and its leaders have repeatedly renewed their endorsement of the Regina Manifesto, thus pledging the party not to rest until it eradicates capitalism from British Columbia.

As reported in the News-Herald of July 22, 1948, Colin Cameron, past president of the C.C.F., told the summer school of the party at Gabriola Island:

A Socialist government in B.C. must move rapidly in the following fields: Production of Electric Power; Logging and Forestry; Telephone Communications; Manufacture of Liquor; Milling of Livestock and Poultry Feeds; Canning of Fish.

A principal objective of the party, he said, was to "fit the B.C. economy into a national programme of removing the major sources of the production of wealth from private hands."

No one, he added, was yet in a position to give a complete and definite statement of the C.C.F. programme.

If a C.C.F. government in British Columbia would work to "remove the major sources of the production of wealth from private hands" under a programme which no one was in a position to define, the prospect would discourage investment capital from engaging in job-creating undertakings in B.C.
