"Trojan" Ships Being Watched

SAN FRANCISCO — Precautions to help guard all American Pacific ports against the possibility of "Trojan Horse" ships, endeavoring to plant atomic bombs are already in full effect. Customs inspectors will board and examine all foreign ships as they enter the three mile limit. Any indications of atomic or bacteriological warfare cargoes will result in holding the ship offshore for full investigation. Any vessels arousing any suspicion will be held in some strait or bay until a complete investigation has been completed. There are plenty of such places for detention of ships where cities would not be endangered.

"Oh, nothing of importance. A couple of salesmen came, I paid the paper boy, and your mother called."
