SATURDAY SERMON

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM

By Archdeacon E. Hodson (St. Peter's Anglican Church)

There are spiritual songs in the Old Testament and in the New, but the Old Testament transcends the New in its spiritual songs. To know a people we must know its songs, as witness the songs of Bobby Burns and Bonnie Scotland.

The Psalms come to us steeped in memories of home and the homeland. Many of us learned the Twenty-Third Psalm at our mother's knee along with the Lord's Prayer, while to some it brings back the memory of an old village church surrounded by its city of the dead.

How wondrous the life of this psalm is. Men have faced death with it upon their lips. It has lifted penitents out of despondency and despair. The Hebrews sang it in old Judea, the captives by the waters of Babylon when they sat down and wept. The Maccabeans sang it as they spent their life-blood for their nation. The shepherds sang it as they watched their flocks in Bethlehem and the early Christians chanted it within the catacombs as they worshipped in fear of their lives.

The Book of Psalms is the book for all men. It is the book of all experiences, aspirations, sorrows, sins, despairs, forgiveness and eternal hope.

We fly to the psalms when the depths of our life are stirred. Take this Twenty-Third Psalm—it has been sung by men for nigh three thousand years. To the Hebrews it suggested God as the great Shepherd of His people, and to Jesus Christ it suggested the ideal shepherd. Prisoners languishing in castle dungeons have found consolation in its words. The dying have passed into the presence of the Good Shepherd whispering its words.

It is said to be a Psalm of David and its opening words are true for all of us. Mill or office worker, sailor or fisherman, tramp or housekeeper, King and counsellor, clergy, lawyer, doctor or gentleman. All may claim their share in "The Shepherd of Israel." It suits the young as well as the old. Principal Fairbairn says it is a young man's psalm written by David when he was a youth, shepherding his father's flock, while Doctor McLaren says "He wrote it when he had grown old, for the singer of this sweet song is one who has travelled far on life's way and his path has not always been smooth and bright. He knows that there are sunny nooks and corners, that life is not all a wilderness, that there are bright patches of green by quiet waters where in the noon-tide hours one may lie down and [illegible]nd one's thirst can be satisfied. He knows too that life is not all pastures of green and waters of rest, for he has to tread many a dark ravine where the sun never shines, and in whose gloomy recesses lurk dangers and wild beasts. Life has been to him as to all of us a chequered experience, but throughout it all one thing has been very real to him. He has always been sure of God. His rod and staff have always been there to comfort him. Rest and refreshment have always been provided and beneath him ever stretched the everlasting arms.

He is sure God's love will be with him all his days, and when the dark valley of the shadow of death looms up, he will fear no evil, for "Thou are with me" and having God he has everything. Is this quiet confidence in God which breathes through this psalm yours and mine?

If not, why not?

Mr. and Mrs. Martin van Cooten returned Friday afternoon on the Coquitlam from a holiday trip to Vancouver and Seattle.
